WOMAN DISCOVERS NEW COE CLEW

The Standard Oil Company, with representatives in almost every town in the United States and in other countries, has joined in the hunt for Harry Clark Coe, Jr., the missing salesman, who ten days ago left his bride of less than a year in their apartment at No. 1200 Commonwealth avenue, started to work as usual and then vanished.

Not only the great Rockefeller company, but also the Hotel Men's Association, the Commercial Travelers' Association, private detectives, police, life insurance men, former schoolmates and thousands of volunteers are searching for young Coe. Yet thus far the search has been without success.

The Standard Oil Company thought well of Coe, who was a protege of President Fogler. The local general manager of the company thought so well of him that he had decided to promote the young man and increase his salary. He had notified Coe to come to him for a conference on this matter before the young man disappeared.

FUR COAT IS A CLEW.

In the desperate search for Coe today, two clews stood out as offering hope of a solution of the mystery. The first is Coe's fur coat, which is expected to get from a tailor shop on the day he disappeared. The second is the statement of a Mrs. Holden of the New England Supply Company.

Cardinal Tecchi Is Dead at Rome

ROME, Feb. 8.—Cardinal Scipone Tecchi is dead here. He was born in Rome June 24, 1854, and was created a cardinal deacon May 25, 1914. He was assessor of the consistory congregation before his elevation to the cardinalate.

COMERY ADMITS POISONING WIFE

MANCHESTER, N. H., Feb. 8.—Oscar J. Comery, who is under indictment on a first degree murder charge of poisoning his wife, Bertha, with strychnine on November 29, at their home, No. 128 Amory street, today changed his plea of "not guilty" to one of "guilty in first degree."

The change of plea will not affect his jury trial, which will proceed.

The indictment alleges that Comery secretly gave his wife two grains of strychnine in a capsule.

Comery was infatuated with a school girl, sixteen years old, named Eunice Campbell, who he wanted to marry. He admitted that this was the motive of the murder.

His wife was many years younger than Comery. He was thirty-four and she twenty-seven. The poisoned woman was the daughter of John Schaller of Clinton, Mass.

Since Comery has been a prisoner he attempted suicide by cutting his throat. The doctors saved his life.

There is a parrallel between the poisoning of Mrs. Comeroy and the Axis Lionel murder for which Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson was executed.

When the State chemist analyzed the contents of Mrs. Comery's stomach he found strychnine enough, he said, "to kill her four times over."

Parliament Staggered by War Losses

LONDON, Feb. 8.—British casualties during the first six months of war reached the enormous total of 104,000 —at least 20 per cent. of all the British engaged. This was announced by Premier Asquith in the House of Commons this afternoon.

The announcement came as a shock to Parliament, which had not been prepared for it. While it had been known that British troops were suffering heavily in the continental campaign the number of casualties had not been thought so large.

Mongolian Rips Hole in Her Bow

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Feb. 8.—The big Allan liner Mongolian arrived here shortly after midnight with a large hole in her bow, caused by striking a rock outside the harbor. The forehold is full of water and the cargo will have to be discharged. She sailed from Philadelphia on January 29 for Newfoundland and Scotland. She is a vessel of 3,088 tons.

EXTRA POLICE OUT TO STOP TONG WAR

The Boston police will have extra men, and men who are in touch with under-the-surface affairs, in Chinatown district tonight to take a hand if the threatened war between the Hip Sing Tong and the On Leong Tong breaks out.

All day today Chinatown was peaceful. There were no extra police on duty, but the regular men were watchful. There was no indication of looming trouble.

Police officials said late today they did not expect trouble, but that they would be thoroughly prepared in case it does come. Every Chinaman, it is understood, has arranged to get under cover very quickly if the war breaks out.

Whatever trouble there may be will not come till after dark, the police believe.

Chinatown was distinctly disturbed when word came that fifteen members of the Hip Sing Tong and ten of the On Leong Tong were on their way from New York to Boston. Soo Hoo Wing, president of the Chinese Merchants' Association, promptly sent his own men to the South Station and the Back Bay to watch for invading tongmen. His sentinels likewise patrolled every corner and every street in Chinatown.

The On Leong Tong men arrived, it is understood, and hurried to Oxford street, where they were quartered by friends. The Hip Sings are believed to be in the South End and Roxbury.

FALZONE GETS DEATH SENTENCE

Biago Falzone, aged twenty-two, convicted of the first degree murder of Morris A. Albertson of Lawrence, who was stabbed and robbed of $2,100 worth of jewelry, December 26, in a shack in Wakefield, was sentenced today to die in the electric chair at Charlestown the week beginning May 9, by Judge Irwin in the Superior Criminal Court, at East Cambridge. At the same time Ignazio Morella, convicted of murder in the second degree, was sentenced to life imprisonment.

The court room was crowded. Falzone pleaded with the judge to save his life as he was only a boy, but was told that the law fixed the penalty. He seemed to be on the point of collapse. Morella was calm.

Luigi Grassadonio, whose case was taken from the jury after he turned State's evidence, was arraigned on an indictment charging him with being an accessory to the plot to rob Albertson. The indictment was returned today by the special session of the grand jury at the request of Assistant District Attorney Frank J. O'Donnell. Grassadonio pleaded guilty and was sentenced to from five to eight years in the State Prison.

Morella and Grassadonio were taken to the State prison this afternoon. Falzone will remain at the East Cambridge jail till within ten days of the date set for his execution. His counsel, John W. Connelly, declared he would immediately prepare a petition asking for a commutation of the sentence on account of Falzone's youth.

Baseball Player Accused of Break

BROCKTON, Feb. 8.—John Alywood, twenty-five, a former Washington American League baseball catcher, was arrested today charged with breaking, entering and stealing an overcoat belonging to the Bloom Tailoring Company. Alywood, it is charged stole the owner's coat, which contained some valuable stocks, and left his own overcoat after him. The police found his name in the coat-collar garment. The prisoner was held over the grand jury.

GREAT CROWD AS "TOODLES" CASE REOPENS

Miss Elizabeth M. Ryan ("Toodles"), returning from a European trip with Harry K. Mansfield, owner of the Ferncroft inn, told how she had "got by" the customs officials with costly dresses by giving one of the customs men a "glad smile," according to testimony today, when the trial of her $50,000 heart balm suit against Mansfield was resumed after a week's delay owing to the illness of a juror.

Mrs. Katherine Peabody of Foxboro, former cook at the inn, declared that Miss Ryan, in reference to Mansfield, had said she wouldn't marry the "big fat slob anyway."

"He put me in a room and locked the door on me," the witness further quoted Miss Ryan as having said of Mansfield.

Mrs. Mary Rohan, an employe at the inn, told of "hugging and kissing" which took place on the occasion of Miss Ryan's first visit to Ferncroft after the Harvard-Yale football game in 1907. Mrs. Rohan said Miss Ryan had then sung this song:

Yale, Yale!
Rah! Rah! Rah!
To h——— with Harvard
Ha! Ha! Ha!
Have a highball then,
Have a cocktail to revive us again—
Hallelujah.

Mrs. Rohan said Miss Ryan had termed the inn "a wonderful place."

"COP MINDS OWN BUSINESS."

Edward McTurk, former police officer at the inn, describing himself as "the kind of a cop that minds his own business," testified that he had seen Miss Ryan and "Morrill" walking arm in arm on the inn grounds two or three times a week.

Attorney Coakley, counsel for Miss Ryan, declared that he would show that McTurk and another witness had been "living on the fat of the

Death Rate Higher in United States

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The death rate for the United States in 1912 showed a slight increase over that of 1911, according to figures published by the census bureau today. ## War Colors Worn by London Women

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The war is responsible for a new style in women's dress. Many women are wearing upon their left arms scarfs or ties of the same colors as the flag of the regiment in which members of their families are serving.

Plan Neutral Congress to Meet Crisis

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The first action in Congress demanding protection for American trade from the dangers created by the German paper blockade of Great Britain and France was outlined in a joint resolution offered by Senator La Follette of Wisconsin today.

The resolution authorizes the President to convey to all neutral nations the desire of this government that an international conference be held for the purpose of promoting by co-operation and through its friendly offices a federation of the neutral nations to protect their rights and to seek an early estimate of peace in Europe. The preamble to the resolution recites that the War has brought about unprecedented conditions surrounding upon the rights of neutral trade and endangering the situation of neutral peoples.

The six objects of such a conference as proposed by Senator LaFollette are:

First—The early cessation of hostilities and the establishment of peace among the warring nations of Europe.

Second—The consideration of uniform rules and regulations for the general limitation of armaments and the nationalization of the manufacture of all equipment and supplies used exclusively for military and naval purposes.

Third—The consideration of rules and regulations for the prohibition of export of arms, ammunition, artillery, vessels of war, armor plate, torpedoes, as and, if found desirable, of food used exclusively for military or naval purposes from one country to another.

Fourth—The ultimate establishment of an international tribunal where any nation may be heard on any mooted invasion rights and in the peace and the development of its national life a tribunal whose decrees shall be enforced by the enlightened judgment of the world.

Fifth—The consideration of plans for the federation of the neutral nations in the adoption of rules and regulations which will provide for the neutralization of certain waters and maritime trade routes and such other and further action as shall insure if possible the peaceful adjustments and representation of the sovereign rights of neutral commerce and neutral rights which it is supposed through the extraordinary conditions developed by the world's greatest war.

Sixth—For such other and further conference which may, if however remotely, to establish permanent world peace.

That the sum of two dollars is to be appropriated for the expenses of the American delegation to such a conference.

Sixth Marquis of Londonderry Dead

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Charles Stewart Vane-Tempest-Stewart, sixth Marquis of Londonderry, died at Stockton-on-Tees today at the age of sixty-three.

The Marquis of Londonderry was one of the foremost leaders of the Ulster movement. Born in Elster, he was graduated from Trinity College, Dublin, which he represented in Parliament. He was one of the largest land owners in Great Britain, holding title to 60,000 acres. Lord Londonderry was created in 1878 to a daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury. They had two children, a son and a daughter.

VESSELS ARE TOLD TO FLY AMERICAN FLAG

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Every British merchantman will be ordered to hoist the flag of a neutral country whenever any emergency arises in which such action will be of assistance. This was made clear at the Admiralty today, closely following the announcement that the hoisting of the American flag on the liner Lusitania had been in accordance with instructions direct from the British government. England will use every resource permitted by international law to protect her shipping.

While the Admiralty believes that the use of neutral flags is necessary on certain occasions, criticism of this method of protection is already heard here. The Daily Express takes the least in objecting to the Admiralty's plan. It calls the scheme a "subterfuge," and its opinion is shared by other leading newspapers. They declare the statement of the Admiralty assuming the Germans in piracy because of their warning that neutral ships may suffer in the war zone fixed by the German Admiralty, but intimate that England will lose prestige if the shipping has to be protected by the flags of non-belligerent nations.

"Ships when war has been declared, or ruled to be hauled down thereby, are inadequate protection on all the seas," asks the Daily Express, after sounding a warning that the Admiralty's procedure will arouse public opinion.

"NOTHING ILLEGAL IN IT"

"There is nothing illegal or opposed to the conventions of civilized warfare in the use of a neutral flag by merchantmen or warships of belligerents to secure capture, but in our case, above all others, such tactics will seem unexpected and even humiliating to the British mind.

"The whole affair leaves a very disagreeable taste in the mouth of England. We do not presume to question or to criticize the disposition of the Admiralty, but our confidence in the Admiralty and in the navy is such that we are bound to regret profoundly a resort to subterfuge which, while it in no way excuses the German piracy, may give the enemy and neutral nations an opportunity for the sneer which we are least inclined to tolerate.

It can be stated that this comment by the British press will not alter the attitude of the Admiralty. Its officials are confident that they have taken the proper action and expect no protest from nations whose flags are used. In this connection they cited many precedents from the United States indorsing the action that was taken to protect the many Americans aboard the Lusitania.

STATEMENT BY ADMIRALTY.

The following statement, justifying the use of the United States flag by the Lusitania, was issued by the Admiralty:

"The use of a neutral flag is, within certain limitations, well established in practice as a ruse de guerre. The only effect in the case of a merchantman of wearing a flag other than her national flag is to compel the enemy to follow the ordinary obligations of naval warfare and sat-

RUSSIA HAS ENTIRE FIGHTING STRENGTH NOW UNDER ARMS

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Russia's full fighting strength is in the field at last after more than six months of war, and the pressure of the offensive that she has hurled against the Austro-German army in the eastern theatre of war is making itself felt on all the battle fronts.

In East Prussia, Northern Poland, west of Warsaw, Southern Poland, Galicia and Bukowina the Czar's myriads are thrusting back the Teutonic allies in the greatest general assault ever recorded in history.

Behind the great armies that are assaulting the Austrians and Germans, foreground dispatches say, are other reserve forces at large, if not larger, than the armies that are waging the battles.

The smashing attacks of the Czar's main host to help the Austrians in the Carpathians have been checked, it is announced, and today the Russian waves are again rolling through the icy passes into Hungary.

Minister of War Sukhomlinoff, who remained in Petrograd when the Emperor left for the front, today declared that Russia had entered into a decisive phase of the war—a phase that could have only one result, and that complete victory for Russia.

"From the Baltic Sea to Southern Bukowina we are now on the offensive," said General Sukhomlinoff. "The flag of the German autocracy has been recalled and is now ebbing. The enemy cannot win."

TAKE 5,000 PRISONERS.

The latest reports from the Russian general staff bears out the prediction of the Minister of War. In the last two days of fighting in the Carpathians the Russians claim to have taken nearly 5,000 prisoners. The Austro-German forces concentrated at Lupkow and Beskid Passes have been compelled to retreat, while in the Bukowina the fighting is turning to the Russians' advantage.

West of Warsaw, Petrograd says, the Russians are holding the positions won at Kamino and have repulsed every attempt of the Germans to recross the Bzura at that point.

In Northern Poland a battle is developing about Ilppin. The Russians have made a number of successful night attacks there.

In East Prussia, north of Gumbinnen, six villages where the Germans had entrenched themselves have been taken by the Russians. Heavy German reinforcements have arrived in East Prussia to resist the Russian advance in the direction of Koenigsberg.

FOUR FIGHT AT GOLMINE.

The Russian victory of the week was won after a seven months' battle hand conflict in which the contestants advanced in masses five hundred deep to be mowed down by deadly machine gun fire or pounded upon the bayonets of the Czar's troops. The fight was the most sanguinary that has yet occurred on the bloody, soaked fields of Poland.

A correspondent of the Novoe Vremya, of Petrograd, who was permitted to go to the front for, today telegraphed the story of the great battle, which resulted in a Russian victory for the Russians.

"The object of the contest," he says, "was to break through at Gumbinnen, which the Germans regarded as the key position. The Russian attack began at 11 o'clock in the morning when the enemy's artillery opened fire. The dense forest between our armies and theirs was covered with a heavy fog, which kept changing forward.

"A battleground all within reach around our armies was created, and the foes were forced to allies of the bodies of German soldiers. The engagement continued until 12 o'clock, when there was a brief lull in the main attack.

"NONE RETURNED ALIVE."

"But soon one and two enormous reinforcements poured in. More bayonet reserves, solid, white our shrapnel wrought great havoc. The hostile columns melted, fell, surged back, and, but a few moments in the rear drove them forward. They desperately sought to penetrate our line in the front and on both flanks.

"We then received reinforcements and the men, without firing a shot, charged with the bayonet. The hand-to-hand fighting with cold steel lasted until 6 p. m. Not one of the foremost ranks of the Germans were annihilated except a handful of wounded. Not a single man of those who broke into our trenches returned alive.

KAISER IN EAST PRUSSIA.

East Prussia, where Field Marshal von Hindenburg won his great victory over the Russians early in the war, is to be the scene of another great conflict, the opening skirmishes of which have already been fought, Berlin experts declare. It is said that important strategical moves have been in progress for some time, and that their results will soon be made known.

Unofficial reports that three corps of 120,000 men each have been sent to the East Prussian front to assist Field Marshal William Hindenburg in his great victory were received here today.

The Crown Prince, who is on the firing line, will hurry here by special train when the stork arrives at the palace. All of war-ridden Germany is a-throb over the news.

Germany Waits for Baby Crown Princess Wishes Son

Crown Princess Cecilie of Germany, who is awaiting the advent of a fifth child at Berlin palace.

BERLIN, Feb. 8.—Berlin is fervently hoping that the stork, which is hovering over the royal palace, will bring another son to Crown Princess Cecilie. The princess is reported to be about the most popular royal couple to have four sons—the Princes William, Louis Ferdinand, Hubertus and Frederick.

report we were maintaining our position.

"On the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

Following is the German official report:

"In the western theatre the battle for our positions on the canal southwest of La Bassee continue. We have recaptured part of a short trench taken by the enemy.

"In the Argonne we took part of our opponent's fortified positions yesterday. Nothing else of importance occurred.

"In the eastern theatre, on the East Prussian frontier southwest of the chain of the lakes, and in Poland, on the right bank of the Vistula, a few successful engagements of local importance occurred. Otherwise there is nothing to report."

Despite the critical situation in the eastern theatre of war, Austria is sending reinforcements to strengthen the German armies in Alsace-Lorraine. Artillery is also being transported from upper Austria and Bohemia. In the fighting east of Soldau and near Altkirch a number of Austria artillerymen were taken prisoners by the French. These prisoners told their captors that a large number of heavy Austrian guns have been concentrated near Strassburg and Metz and also at Muelhausen.

ROUMANIA INVOLVED.

Roumania's entry into the war on the side of the Triple Entente may be hastened as the result of an alleged violation of Roumanian neutrality by Austrian troops.

According to a correspondent of the Paris Journal today, a body of Austrian soldiers tried to force a passage across Roumanian territory in the Danube valley, twenty miles east of the Iron Gate. Fighting followed, the dispatch says, in which the Austrians were put to flight.

The Journal correspondent says that the Austrians opened fire upon the Roumanian guards near Turnu Severin, but that the Roumanian forces, being reinforced, drove back the Austrians, who took their wounded with them.

Turnu Severin is on a railway line running from Temesvar to Bucharest and Austrian troops have been operating in that district for some strategic territory which would prevent Russia from sending troops to reinforce the Servians.

British Airmen Bombard Turks

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 8.—Three Turkish batteries east of the Suez Canal were wrecked and another badly damaged in a daring attack by two British aviators on Saturday. Details of the exploit were received here today. The aviators covered a distance of 132 miles in their flight and returned safely.

Setting out from their station early Saturday morning, the aviators flew at a height of 5,000 feet over the positions held by the Turks. They dropped seventeen bombs upon the batteries mounted by the Turks and three of them were demounted, the gunners being killed. A bomb that exploded near another battery caused heavy damage there and killed two men.

The aeroplanes flew at a height too great to be reached by the Turkish guns. After wrecking the batteries, the aviators flew above the caravan routes east of the canal and destroyed with their bombs many of the wells upon which the Turks depend for water. These had been left weakly guarded and the aviators were able to descend and drop their bombs with great accuracy.

Upon their return flight the aviators destroyed a convoy of supply wagons with seven bombs.

lady himself as to the nationality of the vessel and the character of her cargo by examination before capturing her and taking her into a prize court for adjudication.

"The British government has always considered the use of the British colors by foreign vessels legitimate for the purpose of escaping capture. Such practice not only involves no breach of international law, but is specifically recognized by the law of this country in the Merchant Shipping Act of 1894.

"PIRACY" BY GERMANY.

"In instruction to British consuls in 1914 it is stated: 'A ship is liable to capture if a British character is improperly assumed except for the purpose of escaping capture.'

"As we have in practice not objected to foreign merchant vessels using the British merchant flag as a ruse for the purpose of evading capture at sea at the hands of a belligerent, so we should maintain that in the converse case a British merchant vessel sometimes resorts to a legitimate use in assuming neutral colors for a similar purpose, if she thought fit.

"By the rules of international law, the customs of war and the dictates of humanity, it is obligatory upon a belligerent to ascertain the character of a merchant vessel and cargo before capture. Germany has no right to disregard this obligation.

"To destroy a ship, non-combatant crew and cargo, as Germany announced her intention of doing, is nothing less than an act of piracy of the high seas."

GERMANS EXPRESS SCORN AND ANGER AT FLAG INCIDENT

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Feb. 8.—Mingled scorn and indignation are directed against England in the Berlin newspapers today. The scorn is due to the fact that the British Admiralty finally admitted that it had ordered the Lusitania to hoist the American flag, while the indignation was aroused by the following paragraph in the statement issued by the Admiralty in London last night:

"To destroy a ship, non-combatant crew and cargo, as Germany announced her intention of doing, is nothing less than an act of piracy on the high seas."

The indignation expressed by the newspapers over this accusation of piracy was only a reflection of that felt at the German Admiralty.

"Why must England descend to vituperation and abuse to strengthen her cause," one official asked when he was requested to comment on the British statement.

"England declared the North Sea a war zone, but Germany did not accuse her of piracy.

"She planted mines which have blown up neutral ships that disobeyed her warning, but even then England was not branded as a pirate.

"The British government gave one day's notice as to the war zone it had fixed, but gave two weeks' notice. The neutral countries can judge for themselves which showed the greater regard for non-belligerents.

"Germany's record is clear. England's is not.

"Smoked out," is the way one of the leading papers refers to England's admission that the Lusitania was ordered to hoist the American flag. It refers sarcastically to the fact that "England confesses it needs the help of the American flag to protect its shipping," and continues:

"Our submarines have demonstrated their ability to harass shipping at England's very threshold. England knows her danger. Now she attempts to involve neutral nations.

"Americans, however, can recognize England's purpose. They are not to be misled by the deception for which England has become notorious."

Spain to Buy War Material in America

MADRID, Feb. 8.—Senor Oviedo, director of the government armament works, and Lieutenant-Colonel Rivera of the artillery have started on an official mission to the United States. They will purchase several aeroplanes from factories in the United States.

Turkish Forts Badly Damaged

ATHENS, Feb. 8.—The Turkish forts at Karadope are reported to have been badly damaged by the explosion of the magazines there when two ammunition depots were set on fire by shells from Anglo-French warships. This is expected to hasten the fall of the Dardanelles fortifications.

Kaiser Seizes Food in Private Houses

LONDON, Feb. 8.—An Amsterdam correspondent telegraphed today that the German federal council, according to German newspapers on Saturday, empowered communal authorities to commandeer all stores of grain and flour in private houses above the weight of 25 kilogrammes.

land at the Inn, on honey, quail, champagne, and that each had encouraged the other in what they would say when they got here."

Peter J. Freely of Roxbury, the skit jitter, was in his seat when court opened at 10 o'clock. When the roll call of jurors was read by Clerk Gilchrist, Judge Fessenden from the bench said:

"Mr. Freely need not stand."

The first witness today was Charles M. Brooks, the colored masseur, who was on the stand when the case was postponed.

WOMEN STRUGGLE TO GET IN.

The court room was filled. There were few women among the spectators, but many in the corridors. Here the overflow throng numbered at least a thousand persons. It was a record crowd for the trial.

Miss Ryan and Mansfield were both in the court room. Mansfield entered first. Miss Ryan came through the Judges' lobby entrance with her counsel, Travers Daniel, H. Ashley Cooley and Daniel Daley. Mansfield was seated beside his counsel, Michael Sullivan and James Bonar.

Miss Ryan was accompanied by Rachel Barry, a friend of Cooley. They sat in the front row of witness settees.

Miss Ryan was dressed in a dark brown walking suit with fur trimmings and a light shade. She wore a wide brimmed brown silk hat to match her gown, and the hat was trimmed with marlbou nom-poms to match the fur on her gown.

BROOKS IS FIRST WITNESS.

Brooks, who is a defence witness, was cross-examined by Cooley.

Q.—Who was the sitting beside you? A.—A gentleman.

Q.—I saw it was not a lady. A.—I don't know about that.

Q.—You don't know who that was sitting beside you? A.—I don't know his name. I never met him.

Q.—You ever see him before. A.—Yes.

Q.—Where did you see him? A.—I looked in his face to see if he was the man with whom I went away from the courthouse the last time I was here. He just came up and said, "How're you do?" and I was talking to Mr. Ronan.

Q.—What did he come to you as I came in the courtroom with Miss Ryan? A.—I asked him if the colored lady was Miss Hall, whom I knew. He said he didn't know; he is kind o' hard o' hearing.

SAW HIM AT FERNCROFT.

Q.—McTurk was in a state coming from Salem.

Q.—Ever see him any other place? A.—At the Ferncroft.

Q.—You have glasses on today? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You can see better with glasses? A.—Well, I think one night in a little dimmer with them.

Q.—Well, what is the fact? Can you see better with glasses or not? A.—Well, I don't know.

Q.—You have looked Miss Ryan over as carefully as you could with the eyes you've got? A.—No more than anybody else.

Q.—Has anyone threatened to knife you since you were on the stand last? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Do you remember the name of the detective who came over from Dr. York's office? A.—No.

Q.—Was it Schultz? A.—I don't know, sir.

Q.—Did you, when first here with Schultz, look Miss Ryan over pretty carefully, and say to him, "I think it's her"? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Don't you even tell the jury that it was or was not Miss Ryan? A.—If I told the jury that, it was a story.

Q.—Do you tell a "story" a lie? A.—Yes.

Re-direct examination by Attorney Sullivan.

TELLS AGAIN OF ASSAULT.

Q.—Have you ever knowingly told the jury a lie? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You have told the truth as far as you know it? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Will you repeat the story of the assault committed on you in the apartment of Knoedler the artist in New York? A.—I was massaging a gentleman—he was in a tub—when another man bit me on the back. I said, "My God, don't do that!" He said, "That's all right. It's good for you." Then he bit me again and chained me. I said, "My God, I can't stand this." The gentleman in the tub then looked up and told the colored man to stop. The other man said "Oh, that's only a Bob Fitzsimmons trick."

Q.—Did you have to go to a doctor as a result? A.—Yes, sir. I had to have two poultices placed on my back. I was in misery.

Q.—How long? A.—A good while.

Q.—When you were leaving New York did anything occur at the depot? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What? A.—Two gentlemen met and talked with me about coming to Boston. They cuffed and threatened me.

KATHERINE PEABODY TESTIFIES.

Katherine Peabody of Peabody was examined by Attorney Sullivan. She said that she was a cook and had been employed at Ferncroft Inn the past twelve years. She said she first saw Miss Ryan in 1907. She said Miss Ryan came into the kitchen and asked her if she (Miss Ryan) couldn't buy her a drink. The witness said she declined, as she never touched it.

Q.—Did you see Miss Ryan again that day? A.—Yes, I saw her sitting at a table drinking.

Q.—When did you see her next? A.—Around Christmas time that year.

Q.—During this did you ever hear any talk with Miss Ryan? A.—I don't think so.

Q.—Ever see her with anybody in 1910? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Who? A.—Mr. Morrill, and the co-called Mr. Blank.

Q.—Do you remember Mr. Mansfield's first European trip in company with Miss Ryan? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you talk with Miss Ryan upon her return? A.—Yes, sir.

"WOULDN'T MARRY FAT SLOB."

Q.—What did she say? A.—That she wouldn't marry the "big fat slob anyway." She asked me, "Did you hear what he did?" I said, "No." She said, "Well, he put me in a room and locked the door on me."

Witness further testified that Miss Ryan spoke to her about costly dresses which she brought back from Europe and which she had got by the customs officials by giving one of the officers a "grip smile."

TELLS OF MONEY QUARREL.

Mrs. Peabody testified that she overheard constant quarreling about money between Miss Ryan and Mansfield. She said she overheard Miss Ryan say that she would get money some way, but that she would get it.

She was cross-examined by Cooley.

Q.—Are you a pensioner? A.—Yes, I think I am.

Q.—I hope you get it, but are you a pensioner? A.—I am.

Cooley: "That's all."

Next witness called for defence was Edward Burke of Danvers, now working as a shoemaker in Beverly, and who was employed at Ferncroft in 1910 as a police officer. Questioned by Mr. Sullivan:

Q.—In 1910 did you see Morrill and Miss Ryan about the grounds? A.—Yes.

Q.—How frequently? A.—Three or four times a week.

Q.—Where? A.—Down the hill, about the grove, the bungalow and the back road.

Q.—How will they go? Did they link arms? A.—Sometimes.

Q.—Did you see Morrill and Miss Ryan sitting in the woods? A.—Yes.

Q.—How many times? A.—Very often.

Q.Did you once notice them sitting

"TOODLES" SINGS OF COCKTAILS, YALE AND 'TO H— WITH HARVARD'

This is the song that Miss Elisabeth M. Ryan ("Toodles") sang at a dinner at Ferncroft Inn following the Harvard-Yale football game in 1907:

Yale, Yale!
Rah! Rah!! Rah!!!
To h— with Harvard—
Ha! Ha!! Ha!!!
Have a cocktail then.
Have a cocktail to revive us again—
Hallelujah.
Amen.

—From the testimony today of Mrs. Mary Rohan, an employe at the Inn, on the stand in the Ryan-Mansfield breach of promise suit.

together and then leave to go somewhere? A.—On one occasion I saw them near the grove. They were sitting close together. When I was needed at the bar, they whistled for me. I heard a whistle and went to the bar; then I returned. When I came back they had gone. I waited and both of them came back.

Witness was then cross-examined. Witness said something in an undertone about having been "approached and interfered with."

THREAT AGAINST LIFE.

Q.—Did you tell anybody that someone was trying to pull you away; that you had been interfered with? A.—I was standing in the hall. It was recess. I was near the elevator and was waiting for Mr. Ronan. A man approached me. He said, "Are you following some young ladies?" I didn't know what he meant, and it nearly knocked me off my feet. The man said, "If you follow them any further I will blow you ——— head off."

Q.—You knu wit was your duty to report any such threat to the law, even though Mansfield was paying you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you think Miss Ryan was a guest there? A.—I don't know.

Q.—What did you think Miss Ryan was doing there? A.—I thought she was Morrill's wife.

Q.—Even though she was known as Bess Ryan? A.—A name can be changed easily.

Q.—Why didn't you arrest them or tell Mansfield about it? A.—I thought I minded my own business.

Q.—That's not the business of a cop, to mind his own business? A.—I felt that way about it.

Q.—Is that the kind of a cop you are? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Didn't you attempt to arrest Mansfield one time when you were drunk? A.—Not that I remember.

Q.—Then you will qualify your answer by saying you don't remember? A.—Yes.

Q.—You didn't arrest Mansfield? A.—No.

Q.—Did you have refreshments there in the alcoholic line? A.—Yes.

Q.—When? A.—A week ago last Thursday or Friday.

MISS HORNE PLANS NEW MONEY WAR

Further litigation between Miss Elizabeth Horne and her mother and three sisters is expected to develop from the reported intention of Miss Horne to file today in the Probate Court petitions that her mother, Mrs Matilda F. Horne, and her brother-in-law, Joseph L. Burns of Andover, be compelled to file another bond to protect her interest in property in the estate of her father, John W. Horne of Roxbury, amounting to more than $250,000.

The filing of the new petitions will mark a break in the hearing for an accounting of the estate, which has been in progress before Fred A. Fernald as auditor for nearly three weeks. Since the hearing started Elizabeth Horne has left the family residence, No. 200 Walnut street, Roxbury and gone to reside with friends.

Elizabeth Horne in another petition asks that her mother and brother-in-law be required to give an accounting of a trusteeship agreed upon in January, 1912, whereby Mrs Horne and Joseph Burns were to have charge of some $60,000 in stocks and bonds, already included in the original inventory. About $25,000 of this was drawing interest at 5 per cent, while $30,000 was without income, it is her petition Elizabeth Horne claims she did not receive her share of the income from this portion of the estate.

Mrs. Horne declares she has tried to do her best for her daughters and insists that she would do nothing to discriminate against any of them.

New Poison Deaths in Odd Fellows' Home

Report 11 Inmates "Put Out of the Way"

Group of children at the German Odd Fellows' Home for the Aged at Yonkers, N. Y., where eleven inmates are reported to have been poisoned by "lazy attendants." View of the institution, and Frank J. Fuchs, president of the institution.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—The mystery in the alleged wholesale killing of inmates of the German Odd Fellows' Home at Tuckahoe, near Yonkers, deepened today, when Coroner James P. Dunn received a letter from a former orderly in the home who wrote that two months ago an aged couple and a small child were poisoned and killed because they were in the way. This increased the number of reported dead to eleven.

The orderly gave the names of the three additional victims and called on Police Wolf of Yonkers will meet the latest informant in the hope of obtaining further information which will lead to indictments of those responsible for the crimes.

The orderly stated that while the institution was in Unionport irritant poisons, such as arsenic and morphine, were used to do away with aged persons who became too great a care for "lazy attendants," but that chloroform was substituted as a means of murder after the home was moved to Tuckahoe.

In his letter the former orderly declared that he could furnish information which would not only corroborate the charges made by Frederick Mors, the orderly now under detention in the psychopathic ward at Bellevue Hospital, whose confession to Assistant District Attorney Murphy of Manhattan started the investigation of the deaths of aged people, but would also substantiate the charges that children in the annex to the home were tortured by the matrons.

INMATES BURIED ALIVE!

He said that one method of torture was to bind a child's hands behind his back until a confession of some misdeed that had been committed was forced from him by pain. Then, guilty or not guilty, the child was beaten.

Coroner Dunn is investigating a report current among inmates of the home that a number of the alleged poison victims were buried alive, having only been rendered unconscious by the poisons.

Mors' confession, which was made public today, in detail, is partially substantiated by the testimony of Henry Blum, embalmer for the undertaker who buried Mors' victims, and by the evidence of two women inmates, Mrs. Sazie Schweitzer and Mrs. Elizabeth Grain, who described incidents immediately preceding the sudden death of Mrs. Katherine Plaza, one of the inmates whom Mors says he killed in the presence of the person who instructed him in his gruesome work.

CHLOROFORM USED.

Blum testified that the mouth of Henry Horn, who died in the home December 26, was burned. In Mors' confession he declares that the chloroform he used did burn Horn's mouth, and that afterward he used vaseline to prevent a recurrence. The explanation he gave Blum was that the burn marks were caused by a bandage used to close the jaw so that it would set shut when rigor mortis set in.

The testimony of the two women inmates indicated that Mrs. Plaza was comfortable immediately before her death, and that Mors had ordered one of the women to leave Mrs. Plazza, that he "wished to attend to her." He later announced the woman's death.

In Mors' detailed confession he claims that his victims were killed "because they were in the way."

"They were too old—old people get sick and cause too much trouble." In some cases he used arsenic, in others morphine or chloroform.

MORS' STATEMENT.

Here is the statement of Frederick Mors, the informant, made to Deputy Assistant District Attorney Murphy on February 2:

Q.—Where do you live? A.—Until yesterday I lived in the German Old Fellows' Home in Yonkers.

Q.—How long were you employed there? A.—Since last July.

Q.—Now go ahead and tell me what happened? A.—Twice they attempted to kill two aged persons (naming) —the first time with morphine and the second time with pulverized arsenic acid.

Q.—What was the name of the man they tried to kill with morphine? A.—Mr. Hitz.

Q.—When was it? A.—The beginning of October of last year.

Q.—Why did they try to poison him? A.—He was in the way.

Q.—In the way of what? A.—They don't like the old people. They get very sick and they have too much trouble with them.

Q.—How old was this man? A.—I think about seventy years.

Q.—And he die? A.—Yes, sir.

GAVE HIM MORPHINE.

Q.—What did he seem to die of? A.—He had kidney trouble. The morphine was given for the purpose of making a quick end of him.

Q.—Who gave him the morphine? A.—I did.

Q.—How much did you give him? A.—How many doses? Once night or nine pills, one third of a grain.

Q.—Do you know of any other instances where he had people put out of the way or killed? A.—The next man was Henael.

Q.—When was that? A.—About three weeks after that.

Q.—And under what circumstances? A.—He suffered in the spine and —told me to give him arsenic.

Q.—Had he been in the home for any length of time. A.—Yes, several years.

Q.—And it was the same —— who told you to give arsenic to him? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was your position up there? A.—I was employed first as a porter and later I was a nurse.

TELLS OF 25-DAY BURIAL BY QUAKE

ROME, Feb. 8.—Michele Calcio who was rescued from the earthquake ruins at Avezzano yesterday afternoon, being entombed for twenty-five days, told his story here today. Calcio, who is thirty years old, was brought here and placed in a hospital for treatment. Despite his experience he is in fairly good physical condition and will recover.

"I had hoped myself to death when I was rescued," said Calcio. "I never expected to get out alive. I was sleeping when the earthquake came and the next thing I knew I was under the ruins of a stable. Fortunately I had a bed for one of the beams had fallen in such a way that I had room to move my body.

"First the pangs of starvation and thirst nearly set me insane and then the longing for death drove me into temporary fits of delirium. When my hunger became so keen I could stand it no longer, I munched the straw from a horse and found that it contained some nourishment, although it was a sickening diet.

"The snow which fell upon the ruins melted in the sunshine and I soaked up the water in my garments and drank it. The straw and the melted snow saved my life.

"Six degrees I got used to the helplessness and loneliness of my position, although my body became partly paralyzed. I got so weak that I would sleep for many hours. At times I dreamed I was in the fields and the horror of my position came back with double force when I awoke.

"Calcio lost thirty pounds and his hair had turned white. When rescued he did not even know what month it was.

AID PROSPERITY BY BUYING NOW

"Buy It Now" movement inaugurated in the Boston AMERICAN has aroused business men throughout New England to a realization that concerted buying effort now would restore good times almost as quickly.

Every reader of the AMERICAN should join this great movement as it is spreading over the country. It is not extravagance to buy those things that are matters of necessity. Articles of wear and household use were never so cheap as now. The average merchant's prices are lower now than they are likely to be for a long time. So that in turning now you are really saving money.

If you have any ideas which you think will help the "Buy It Now" campaign send them to the Buy It Now editor of the Boston AMERICAN. Everything is expected to help. The following article shows how

"BUY IT NOW" MEANS NEW PROSPERITY FOR BUSINESS

By W. H. ROSS.

"Buy It Now" is a suggestion which means prosperity to all of the United States if followed. There is no logic reason why business should not be good right now. The only reason why manufacturing plants should be either closed or running on part time is because of the fear of the future. Depression is due almost entirely to fear of what is going to happen. The people are buying only the necessities of life. They are not buying the luxuries. They are not buying the ordinary things that go to make up the pleasures of and surround civilization, including household goods, wearing apparel, etc. Right now everything is cheap. Prices are falling so fast that the average man does not know what to buy. He is afraid to buy because he thinks that if he waits a little while he will be able to get the same article for less money. This is especially true of the necessities of life. The people are spending a thousand dollars for luxuries where they used to spend only a hundred, and he spends more money for other things than he used to. Instead of buying a new suit of clothes or a new overcoat he will have to run it full capacity for another year.

This is all another reason why everybody should "Buy It Now." Prices are cheaper and values made in this country are on bargain level. It is questionable if many things will be as cheap again for years, if ever, as they are now. Therefore it is real economy to change our policy to buy for immediate use instead of to wait until prices are forced to a higher level at present cheapness and "Buy It Now."

Join in the 'Buy It Now' Campaign

Don't hoard money. To do so postpones the coming of big prosperity.

"Buy It Now."

Don't put off ordering things you really need until some indefinite future time.

"Buy It Now."

Prices will advance, in the opinion of business leaders. Save money by immediate purchase of necessities.

"Buy It Now."

"Buy It Now."

"Buy It Now" movement will bring about a trade revival and good times and new prosperity.

URGES $8 WEEKLY SALARY FOR GIRLS

The minimum wage scale for women as was pressed by the Rev. John A. Ryan of St. Paul Min., expert economist and teacher, who declared that a salary of $8 a week is insufficient for a woman and to live upon properly in accordance the economically meeting at Memorial Hall, Melrose.

According to Father Ryan, legislation is not only a right and sure way of advancing the minimum wage scale for women, but is a necessity. In the states, this would prevent the doing of a week for and would create all the lower pay at which anybody could profitably be asked to work.

He said the usual principle which a woman could live upon was the sum of $12 a week, according to the economists.

"The fact that a girl lives at home should be no reason for giving her small wages," Father Ryan commented. "If she fully supports herself she cannot live at home on less than $8 a week, and she should have more home."

"CLUTCHING HAND" FORCES HEROINE TO GIVE BLOOD IN "EXPLOITS OF ELAINE"

SAW MAN LIKE COE THROWN OUT OF HOUSE IN SOUTH END

that she believes she saw Coe on Northampton and Albany streets last Saturday night as disappeared.

The local investigation centred today on these two points.

Young Mrs. Coe is breaking down. According to her mother, Miss Alice A. Ainslee, she now and then imagines she sees her husband returning, and holds out her arms to welcome him, only to droop disappointedly when the vision vanishes. She is very nervous and is forced to take opiates to help her sleep.

Mrs. Ainslee discussed the case today at some length. She said:

"Mr. Ainslee and I came from Dublin in response to a telegram from Dr. Coe.

"Dr. Coe wired that he was concerned for the health of Harry and urged us to come to Boston at once. In a newspaper purchased on the train we first noticed Harry's disappearance.

"Since our arrival we have been driven almost distracted by telephone calls. My daughter is in a bad condition, and I'm glad we can be here with her. She is so nervous that if any one comes to the door she wants me to talk loud enough so that she can hear it in her room.

THINKS SHE SEES HIM.

"She has times when she thinks she sees Harry, and she will stretch out her arms as though to receive him. She cries hysterically for me whenever I leave her room. That was so yesterday. He gave her opiates to help her sleep, and last night she really slept for the first time.

"She tells me she thinks if Harry's overcoat is found the searchers will begin to get somewhere. I also think the coat is an important item. Before he left the house Harry opened the window in the front room. A coat of cold air came in and he turned to my daughter and said: 'Don't you think I'm going to take my fur coat today. It's pretty cold.'

"I think that coat was probably taken to some tailor who was a friend of one of Harry's customers, for Harry had a way of having such work done by friends of his customers. It was his eye for business, you see.

"The other cities, Providence, Winthrop, Colchester and Winchester, have proved valueless, the area on which we are centring our efforts now was given us by a Mr. Holden of the New England Supply Company, Northampton and Albany streets. She said she saw a young man who she is positive was Harry at the corner at 10:30 Saturday night.

MANY TELEPHONE CALLS.

"Of course we have great many telephone calls, some of them helpful, and these we always investigate very promptly.

"There is one thing that may be added to Harry's description as it was given out. He wore a Hamilton watch, size 16, twenty-three jewels, No. 753,867. It was in a silver 60 the back. It cost $75 and inside the back case was engraved the name of my daughter.

"It ought to be clearly understood that Harry's affairs with the company were in good condition. Since he disappeared the general manager, Majestic Theatre, Haverhill Hijou Theatre, Ware, Mass. Eglaston Sq. Theatre, Roxbury Waltham Theatre, Waltham Gem Theatre, Leominster Grand Theatre, Marlboro Pearson's Lyric Sq. Theatre, Somerville Music Hall, Webster Colonial Theatre, Malden Lyceum, Woburn Winthrop Hall, Dorchester Dorchester Theatre, Dorchester Gem Theatre, Winchendon Auditorium, Taunton Lawson Theatre, Beverly Odd Fellows' Hall, Somerville Lyric Theatre, Pittsfield Melrose Auditorium, Melrose Lyric, Northampton Opera House, Westfield Opera House, Westport Columbian Theatre, Attleboro Lothian Theatre, Fitchburg Scenic, Marlboro Lyceum Theatre, Marblehead Majestic Theatre, Holyoke Armory, Stoneham Idle Hour Theatre, Hyannis Orpheum Theatre, Gardner Novelty, Springfield Crescent Gardens, Revere Comique, New Bedford and two other officials have come here. The general manager said he intended to call Mrs. Holden and promote him, and had notified Harry to come to a conference for that purpose.

"Harry was very successful in business. And we are positive that Harry is not dissipating. Either he is a victim of foul play or he is very ill.

"Mrs. Mary Holden of No. 975 Tremont street employed the New England Supply Company, who furnished the latest clew to Coe, told this story.

THROWN FROM HOUSE.

"A week ago last Saturday night I was walking along Northampton street, near Tremont, with my children. We were coming from a moving picture show. Near Tremont street, a well-dressed man without hat or coat was thrown from a house. He bumbled down the steps and landed in front of us.

"Two burly, red looking men rushed back into the house. There was money scattered all over the sidewalk, and a roll of bills on the steps. The match gold watch was hanging from his pocket.

"He was dazed, but got up and ran. He disappeared down the alleys and I started to assist him, but question him, but he seemed loath to answer my questions.

"He seemed well educated. My boys put on his rubbers and he thanked them. I advised him to go back into the house and recover his watch and his money, but he said he didn't want to.

"I have studied closely the picture of Mr. Coe. And I took a good look at this young man. He was not of the same build nor height as Coe, but for him I wanted to help him. But he vanished away. What a mystery, anyhow!

"I feel sure this man was Coe. He resembled the picture and I am positive in his identification.

"There is Coe's whereabouts may come from Cleveland, O.; New York city, Omaha, N. H.; Providence and Washington.

In addition, the police of Greater Boston are trying to learn from the taxicab Coe was last seen taking to his home to come into Boston. A week ago Saturday morning, step by step to the last possible moment.

As you mount a hill the landscape constantly gains beauty, so in the Exploits of Elaine with each episode gains in interest. The fifth episode, entitled "The Vampire," tops all the others that preceded it, in the power of the story and in the admirable character and execution of the pictures.

In this episode we see Elaine receiving Craig Kennedy, who in an access but not excess of concern for her safety presents her a loaded revolver and shows her how to use it. That night she falls asleep after bestowing the guarding weapon carefully under her pillow. It is past midnight, a sound at her window awakes the heiress. Lying perfectly still with control that events have taught her she moves only her great, intelligent eyes. Within their range comes a burly figure that is thrusting itself into the room. With the quickness of lightning she thrusts her hand under the pillow, and without an instant's hesitation, as her detective friend has counselled, she fires at the interloper. He reels backward and the great body hurtles downward through the night air.

Two waiting comparions seize the prostrate figure and drag it into a waiting automobile.

The automobile flys like some great bird of the night, through the silent streets, into the country and straight to a deserted house. The wounded man is carried into a room and the master of the Clutching Hand is summoned. The twisted figure crouches beside him, and the handkerchief masking his face, listens to his story. Enraged that the Clutching Hand has imperilled, if not lost, one of its strongest fingers, he orders that a surgeon be summoned, and if he comes unwillingly, to drag and carry him to his patient perforce.

Amused and a little frightened at his treatment, the surgeon summons his professional calm, makes an examination, and says: "Transfusion of blood may save him. It is the only hope."

Infuriated, the leader of the evil band vows: "She who shot him shall give her blood to save him."

That Elaine, the precious, the beloved, the wealthy, guarded by a staff of faithful servants, could be kidnapped from her well-nigh impregnable home seems inconceivable.

Yet after the girl has dismissed the frightened servants, summoned by the pistol shots to her room, and after she has ordered the cellie to lie sentinel-like at the locked door, she falls asleep, only to be awakened by the presence of two men as burly and formidable as her first visitor. They have contrived to enter the house. One sends fumes of a narcotic under the door, stupefying the faithful collie. In an instant they are within, and one sees the sleeping girl, while the other pinions her hands. Swiftly she is carried down the stairs.

When, in the early morning, two workmen call to secure the armor that had been discovered by Elaine and her attorney to be in need of repair, it might have been observed that it was unusually heavy, and that the collie, sniffing distractedly, followed it.

While the ruffians carried the girl who, unconscious, has been encased in the armor, in the deserted house where lay the victim of her treacherousness, the frantic dog was following. Arriving at the house and carried into the room where lay her burly victim, Elaine, recovering consciousness, struggled and tried to scream.

"Is this woman willing to give her blood for this man?" demanded the surgeon, but a pistol flourished disconcertingly near to his face silenced him. He ordered her placed in a long chair beside the wounded man's couch. He places their wrists together and tightly binds them. Elaine's drawn, deathlike features show that the work of transfusion, the sacrifice demanded by science, had begun.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver. If your liver is right there's no need of having a sallow complexion, muddy skin, tired eyes — pimples — a bilious look in your face — dull, lack with no sparkle.

Your doctor will tell you 90 per cent. of all sickness comes from inactive liver. Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound to act on the liver and bowels which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exhilarating of spirit that natural buoyancy which should belong to every one. Nothing can take the place of Nature's remedies.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists sell them. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, O. —Advertisement.

ADAM LIKE, THIS MAN BLAMES GIRLS FOR REMAINING SINGLE

The heartaches that underlie the question, "Why so many women are single" are not suffered exclusively by the women, judging from the letters from male correspondents flooding in on the Right Man Editor. Is a man, or is it woman, to blame for the social condition that exists in Boston and big cities generally?

And the girl "who turned you down," to remain in stately spinsterhood, do it because you were the only one to offer, and you did not measure up to her standard, or was it because she already had a family of her own to care for in the shape of an ailing mother and younger brothers and sisters. Or was it because she was a little mother, filling the place of a mother snatched away by untimely death, filling the place so long that opportunities ceased—till it was too late?

SAME THE GIRL.

What is your solution of the problem? Today some men try to answer the question. Manlike, they place the blame on the other sex. Some men think that with the competition for a really desirable girl so keen and her conditions so expensive, that it costs too much to become well enough acquainted with a girl to ask her to marry you, that you are nearly bankrupt when the time does come, and to condition to support a wife. Often men think the girls decline to marry the man they really like because by marrying him they would have to live up to the expectations of neighbors and friends. They think it "rash"—sordid, economical reasons are the basis of the whole problem.

The women, most of them, believe that they would have married had the field of selection been large enough for them to have exercised a free privilege of choice. They claim that residents of life allowed them to choose but from two or three, and at none of the lot measured up to rank, or that the one to be desired glued the courage, for many reasons, to "pop the question."

But what is your reason? Were you not attractive enough? Was HE attractive only till a more attractive HE appeared? Did his field of selection enlarge till you were crowded out? Are you one of "the little fishers" whom, lost in the end on account of your self-sacrifice, or are you the victim of an everlasting love for one who just drifted out of your life? Whatever the reason, write him, if only to point the way for those floundering over the same lonely path.

MAN BLAMES WOMAN.

Right Man Editor:

I noticed in your columns today an invitation for all women interested to give their opinion on "What can the matter be?" I noticed that one of your readers criticizes men severely in that they have the right to take the initiative steps, as it were.

I am a young man myself who has put considerable study and deep thought on the serious problems of today. Especially in studying the divorce problems, I believe I have some of my conclusions on the subject of whether the blame for divorce proceedings is to be placed before one couple or after, those conclusions I think are right.

Now, as I am a man, I know I have no right to answer your letter but the matter isn't common. But I am going to ask a question. Who is to blame that there are so many old maids or so many marriage failures—the man or the woman? I contend that the blame in the overwhelming majority of cases lies on the woman's shoulders.

I contend that the reason the right man never comes to so many girls is that the girls are in some way to blame.

If you desire, I had just as soon correspond with any number, providing it is done through your columns, as I wish to be protected from frivolous correspondence.

I have put very serious thought on these questions and I will welcome any one who will sincerely and earnestly discuss this subject.

LUD S.

Norwood, R. I.

LACK OF OPPORTUNITY.

Right Man Editor:

There are very few unmarried people who would care to marry who do not meet others of the opposite sex frequently whom they would like to be acquainted with, but all they can do with propriety is to go their way without even a smile or pleasant word, never to meet again.

It is almost impossible to get acquainted with people just such as one would like to know. A dance hall is not a good place for forming such acquaintances and churches do not appear to be any more helpful.

The sidewalks are nightly filled with youths, a majority of whom are lonesome in their environment.

The majority of these are good-hearted and if some way were provided for them to meet several suitable companions the street would be somewhat deserted evenings.

If you would found a marriage bureau, under the auspices and presence of a progressive clergyman, making the service merely self-supporting, you would benefit humanity more than is possible in any other way.

Low salaries or the present cost of living are but small factors. Social reform is need.

M. J. L.

PLEADS FOR HALL ROOMERS.

Right Man Editor:

Why worry about the rich and well-off or married? It is the furnished-room girl or boy that needs marriage and a home, and these same conditions cause them to go in careless company rather than be lonesome, and then they feel that marriage would be too binding. Get the working girl and boy before they are twenty-five, that is the time for them to marry and work for one another, through sunshine and sorrow.

GIRL OF THIRTY WHO NO MORE CARES.

Boston.

THIS ONE TOO QUIET.

Right Man Editor:

The young men these days want girls that can spend the money in dress, paint and powder, as they seem to get good husbands. I have had a number of very nice young gentlemen friends, but they had money and just wanted enjoyments. I am of a very quiet disposition; by that I mean I don't visit dance halls or keep late hours, and I don't allow young men to take any liberties, so I guess that in my reason for being single.

VAIN DREAMS OF IDEALS.

Right Man Editor:

Every eligible man is swarmed with ambitious girls bent on a "good catch" and a secretly wounded girl with dreams of an ideal home can seldom meet a good man, as she will not lower herself to hang around him and he gets no chance or does not think of seeking her. I consider the single girl is generally considered a prude and is not supposed to care for men, but just give her a chance to show what she really is! When it is considered good form for a girl to openly send her boy friends and is encouraged to do so, then there will be more chance of equal happiness and the selfish girl will find that she does not have the right of way.

ATTRACTIVE BACHELOR GIRL.

SUGGESTS MARRIAGE EXCHANGE.

Right Man Editor:

Will you kindly allow an old bachelor to have a word to say on a question that interests single men perhaps fully as much as it interests single women?

There is hardly in this State a single man who is worthy of the love of a good woman who would not rather be married than single if he could find the right woman. Perhaps a man goaded to desperation by the discomforts of boarding houses asks a woman and learns that she is receiving in alimony far more than he can earn, or perhaps she is receiving a pension or has some other income and prefers to live on a sure income to trying an uncertainty.

Women who would not marry are urging to tax the bachelor and at the same time are shipping Eastern women to be boasts of burden for illiterate peasants of the Western wilds.

I haven't a word to say against love in a cottage, but when men, alien in birth and alien in morals, demand Eastern wives and get them, too, there is something decidedly wrong in our methods of getting acquainted with each other.

I would suggest reliable places where an honest man can go and learn of honest women who would marry if asked, where honest women could go and learn of honest men who wish to marry.

Palestine for Jews, Says Rabbi Calisch

WORCESTER, Feb. 8.—Rabbi Edward N. Calisch of Richmond, Va., addressing the Grand Lodge of B'nai B'rith, referred to the future of Palestine, saying:

"If Germany wins in the great struggle there is no doubt Turkey will retain possession of Palestine. The government of Turkey to Palestine has been never bad from a Hebrew standpoint as compared with the sufferings in Roumania, Russia and other countries.

"Diplomatically and politically speaking every nation would like to control Palestine. Russia most of all. Russia would like to make it to Greek Catholicism what Rome is to Roman Catholicism. Palestine should never be the possession of any single power. Palestine is the one place in all the world which should be absolutely neutral.

"It should be given to the Jews, so that they may take care of its splendid traditions."

New Strike Riot Is Led by Women

ROOSEVELT, N. J., Feb. 8.—Another riot occurred in this strike-swept section today when fifty angry women charged a number of workers who were returning to their jobs at the fertilizer works. The men returning to work were not strikers, but had been laid off because of the shutting down of the plant.

Today when they started for the works the women tried to turn them back. Many blows were struck and one man was knocked down and trampled on. Some of the men swept by the women, but most of them retreated. The police were powerless to prevent the disturbance at the start, but soon gained the upper hand.

A-K Tablets for Various Forms Of Headache

"It is necessary in order to treat headaches properly to understand the causes which produce the glow," says Dr. J. W. Ray of Stockton, Ala. Continuing he says: "The serious cases of headache in the treatment of a disease without knowing what causes give rise to it, and we must remember that headache is to be treated according to the same rule. We must not only be particular to use a remedy intended to counteract the cause which produces the headache, but we must also give a remedy to relieve the pain until the cause of the trouble is removed. To answer this purpose Anti-kamnia Tablets will be found a most convenient and satisfactory remedy. One tablet every one, two or three hours gives comfort and rest in the most severe cases of headache, neuralgia and particularly the headaches of women.

When we have pain and realize that the attacks of sick headache, we should endeavor to keep his bowels regular, for which nothing is better than "Aetolds," and when he feels the least sign of an oncoming attack, he should take two A-K Tablets. Such patients should always be instructed to carry a few Anti-kamnia Tablets, so as to have them ready for instant use. These tablets are prompt in action, and can be depended on to produce relief in a very few minutes. Ask for A-K Tablets.

Anti-kamnia Tablets can be obtained at all druggists.

POLICE IN DUEL WITH FLEEING TRIO

ATTLEBORO, Feb. 8.—Three men believed to be the burglars who broke into two local business places last night were chased by the police into a field, and escaped after an exchange of revolver shots.

The men were seen prowling around the freight yards by Patrolmen Alfred Sea and William Norwood. When called on to submit to arrest, they fled. The policemen opened fire, seemingly without effect, and two of the men halted in their flight to fire back at the patrolman.

The chase continued for a quarter of a mile. Then the men were lost sight of in the woods of the Bencroft district.

C. W. Eddy's confectionery store and the buffet lunch room were entered, it was discovered later, and small articles taken.

A telephone pay station, with $15 contents filled, was found in the street. The police have no clew as to where it belonged.

One of the supposed burglars was 5 feet 6 inches in height, wore a blue suit and cap, another wore a dark long coat and a soft hat, and was of about the same height. No near view of the third was obtained.

The men are supposed to be the same who entered the Butler hotel room late last night, one showing a chauffeur's license and saying he was from Boston. They were also reported near the First National Bank, which, observers say, they appeared to be scrutinizing carefully.

Woman Rescued at Milton Fire

Fred Ferretta of No. 2 Martin terrace, Milton, arose at his usual hour today and was half dressed when he heard the crackling of flames, jumped into the upstairs hall and saw smoke. Clad as he was, Ferretta went out a window onto the veranda roof and fell from a mile to the Rain Milton house house. When the firemen responded James Haven, fireman, rescued Mrs. Ferretta from an upper room by way of the veranda roof. The second floor, however, is owned by John McLaurine. The damage was $300.

CALLS ON HARVARD TO SHOVEL SNOW

The Harvard Crimson editorially asks a share today of the University donation for its taxes in having the snow removed from the University property, and thus offering up health of the college boys on the altar of extravagance. The Crimson is in part:

"In the southern side of Massachusetts avenue, where the sidewalks hold sway, the going is entirely good, but on the north side, the domain of the Cambridge, it is abominable. In many places the boarded walks are non-visible, but not through any business effort. And the result that confronts the commuters on the northern shores of Massachusetts avenue is a veritable ice field, varied by a caricature.

"In the interest of prompt relief from this distressing condition, which allowed to go on indefinitely will be a menace to health, it is suggested that the University hire an extra gang of men to work with shovels to clear the impassable parts of the sidewalks. Such a measure is all that the situation demands. Here are only three relatively easy solutions, could still be adopted, and we feel sure that the need for such a stand was realized, if still unfelt, by the University authorities."

Sunday Says Navy 'Can Lick Stuffin'

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 8.—Billy Sunday began his day of rest today by going to the Philadelphia navy yard for an informal visit to the officers and men of the battleships. By J. P. MURPHY.

THE Amateur Boston Pin League has reached exciting stages. For the first time this season one team has singled itself out of the fold far enough to be considered dangerous. This team is the Cottage Park Yacht Club.

From the start, the Yachtsmen have been regarded as a serious contender for the championship, but their latest record-breaking spurt, which has carried them five points ahead of the field, has all of them on their toes.

COLONIAL, after a slump which at one time threatened to put it out of the race, has shown its "come back" powers and is now trailing the Corsair by two points. Next in order are the Arlington Boat Club and Osfords of Lynn, which are tied for third place, only one point in the rear of Colonial.

* * *

THE Oxford quintet has fallen off badly and an immediate brace is the only thing that will keep it in the running at this late stage. Arlington is holding fast as long as Baker maintains the consistent pace that has carried him far in the lead of the individuals, and the "fresh water sailors" must be counted in. The title undoubtedly rests between the quartet of aforementioned teams.

* * *

THIS evening will see the "simon pures" off on the third and last round of the season. Three of the "Big Four" will roll tonight, the Arlington Boat Club at Dudley, Colonial at the B. A. A. and Cottage Park at home against the Winthrop Y. C.

* * *

WITH only three weeks to go, Towanda has practically clinched the Mystic Valley League championship, having established a lead of five points. There is still a chance of the Woburn team being overhauled, however, but this is hardly likely.

* * *

ABOUT this time last year Mystic Valley Leaguers were witnessing one of those heart-breaking finishes that you often read about but seldom see. If memory serves us right there were three teams in this race, and the championship went down to the very last week before a decision was finally reached.

* * *

THE recent matches in the Walworth Manufacturing League furnished several surprises. The Main Office, with two subs in its lineup, took all four points from Mechanic Shop. Cody a substitute, coming through with a single of 121. Brass Shop, minus Burke, its star anchorman, made a clean sweep of the points in its match with Factory Office and jumped into fourth place in its pronged match to overtake the Main Office. Powers proved the sensation of the Brass Shop victory.

* * *

NICK WALTERS of Adams Square, and his brother, Harry, of the Beverly team of the North Shore Leagues are out with a challenge to any two brothers in Greater Boston. Both boys are consistent peggers.

CHARLIE RINNING and George Arafe, the crack 18-year-old tandem, will dissolve partnership long enough to settle the question of supremacy in a twenty string match. The first ten strings will be rolled at the Bowdoin Square alleys, Wednesday night, and the second ten at the American alleys a week from Wednesday.

* * *

THE Adams Square House League has developed one of the closest races of the season. The Creasents and Atkins are tied for the lead, while Market and Cornhill Stars are joint holders of third place, but a point behind. The Lovell & Covel team is only two points back of the leaders, making five of the eight teams within three points of one another.

* * *

THE Dodds and Queens will roll a series of five matches to decide the championship of the Dodds Paint factory. The first of these contests will be rolled next Friday evening.

A PROTEST.

Dear Sir: Why are you knocking the Johnson-Willard fight? Did you lose some money on Jeffries or are you sore because Tom Jones won't buy you a drink?

J. A. STEPHENS.

A RESPONSE.

Dear Mr. Stephens: We won $12.50 in regular money on the Jeffries fight and we have absolutely no kick against Mr. Johnson on that score.

Furthermore, we have no hope that Tom Jones will ever buy us a drink. It is an unusual affair with Tom, and we couldn't afford to hang around for a whole year.

Nevertheless, we continue to place our mark of disapproval on the alleged Johnson-Willard fight.

If Johnson wins, the promoters will lose money. The gate receipts will not be enough to pay the purses and other expenses. Fight promoters are philanthropists. They stage fights for the benefit of the dear public without regard for the monetary losses that might accrue, do they not? Sure they do.

If Willard wins, he will be plastered on the billboards as the redeemer of the white race, and a lot of persons will pay regular money to see him, thereby enriching Tom Jones, Jack Curley and whoever else is implicated in the Juarez deal.

There is no doubt that the fight of humor.

GOSSIP FOR THE MOTORISTS.

By J. C. KERRISON.

After more than two seasons spent in piloting European racing cars, Harry F. Grant, winner of two Vanderbilts and decidedly well known in this city, he being a native of Cambridge, has patriotically forsworn the products of alien manufacturers and has recruited the ranks of American trophy defenders.

In the big San Francisco road races, inside the Exposition grounds, Grant will be seen at the wheel of a Maxwell, and will have for teammates Bill Carlson, Barney Oldfield and Eddie Rickenbacher.

Grant is one of the few Eastern drivers regularly engaged in racing and is a veteran of the sport. He captured the Vanderbilt Cup races of 1909 and 1910, figuring also with credit in many other competitive events.

The entry list for the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races up to date numbers nineteen and they include the great bulk of famous race drivers in this and other countries. Louis Disbrow, the present mile champion, has entered his Simplex "29," which has broken so many records on mile tracks. C. F. Newhouse will pilot a Delage car. Two Maxwells have been nominated, both to be driven by their owners, A. A. Caldwell and W. A. D'Alene. Tazio Gabbi will be at the wheel of the Tahin Special and the Duesenberg pair will be handled by Edward O'Donnell and Tom Alley. In addition to these, there is the Stutz team with Anderson, Cooper and Wilcox as drivers; the Marmon team, managed by Eddie Pullen, as well as the Maxwell quartet. Ralph LeCain of this city, will drive a Chevrolet six-cylinder. De Palma's official entry with the Mercedes has not yet been made, but is expected shortly. Likewise, the entry of Dario Resta, the crack English driver who arrived in this country recently, is expected, and it is probable that he will handle a Peugeot.

Auto Driver Dying After Crash in Race

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 8.—The machine of Jack Callaghan, race driver, skidded through a fence in a ten-mile automobile race at Ascot Park. A large hole was torn in Callaghan's chest.

Callaghan was third to the twelfth mile when the accident occurred. His mechanician, Victor Wells, was not hurt, and seizing the wheel, he brought the car to a stop.

Eddie O'Donnell and Tom Alley finished first and second, in 1:41:15 2-5 and 1:41:31.

Students Must Swim for Tiger Diplomas

PRINCETON, Feb. 8.—It became known here today that Princeton will strictly enforce the requirement of students being able to swim six lengths of the local pool, or 200 yards, using at least two different kinds of strokes, before graduation.

The new rule was made in 1911, when the present senior class entered, but few believed that the authorities would withhold diplomas because of this deficiency. However, the registrar recently issued notices to the twenty-five seniors who have not yet accomplished the feat that they will have to pass the test in order to be graduated in June. Some of the prominent athletes are of this number.

Wolgast Tough, Ritchie Game, Welsh Clever

Charlie White, the Chicago lightweight, says that of all the men he has fought, Freddie Welsh is the cleverest, that is, knows the most about boxing; Ad Wolgast, the toughest, and Willie Ritchie, the gamest. He doesn't classify Joe Shugrue, who recently outpointed him at the Garden. White says he thinks he holds the record for boxing champions, including the "ex-ones," of course. During his career he has met five of them, Attell, Kilbane, Wolgast, Ritchie and Welsh. Surviving five tenders is a real record, is it not?

Wrestlers Suffer Crushed Bones in Title Mat Bouts

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—While defending his title as national A. A. U. champion 158-pound wrestler at the Illinois Athletic club, Ben Reuben picked up his opponent, E. C. Babcock, another Chicago wrestler, and hurled him to the mat. Babcock's collarbone was broken in two places.

Han Torpe retained his title of 115-pound champion of the Central A. A. U. A. C. Hinkley with only one other opponent in his class won the C. A. A. C. heavyweight championship.

One other contestant, Henry Beck, was injured. This also was in the 158-pound class. Beck was picked up by A. G. Peterson with a reverse body hold and thrown heavily. One of his ribs was fractured.

JESS WILLARD TRAINING HARD TO DEVELOP BLOWS TO OUTSCORE JOHNSON

JESS TRAINED TO HIT IN CLINCHES

BOUTS TONIGHT.

Young Saylor vs. Eddie Hoy at Philadelphia.

Al. Wanagans vs. Young O'Brien at Birmingham, Ala.

Bobby Waugh vs. Joe Acevedo at Memphis.

Bob Moak vs. Gus Christie at Milwaukee.

Cy Smith vs. Ad. Wolgast at Columbus.

By ED W. SMITH.

"THE word boxing isn't even in the Mexican vocabulary," says the man who is sending out matter from the scrap zone of the Villa-Carranza country. "This isn't going to be a boxing match; it's a fight, pure and simple, for that is what both men signed up for. Hitting always with the free arm in a clinch or half clinch is permissible down here. Hence strength and endurance will be everything when the Johnson-Willard battle is started the afternoon of March 6. The contest will not be a pink tea affair. It will take something more than science to win."

AND if ever a fellow in the world will need a friend that afternoon it will be the gent who is finally chosen to act as referee. Unless he is a pretty firm character and can see through the blinding smoke that will arise from the maddened Willard rooters' yells when Johnson starts some of his fancy work in the clinches he will be in a bad way. And fancy work that is, believe me!

* * *

YOU'VE all heard about Fred Welsh being one of the greatest fighters when it comes to clinches that ever were known. Also we've heard how Jimmy Clabby can lamp on and whang away at an opponent, all the time making the referee think his opponent is doing it all. Well, for the real infighting artist of the world recommend us to this Johnson man. Just as the press agent says, he loves to hold and hit.

* * *

BUT why should he be permitted to do so? It's plainly against the rules, isn't it? Of course. But in Mexico they make their own rules for a lot of things and why not for this little Queensberry argument, into which the Queensberry code evidently is not to be injected to any great extent.

* * *

JOHNSON as champion is going to have a whole lot to say about the rules to govern this contest. Usually in championship contests the code is modified to fit the whim of the then champion. But even Johnson isn't bold enough to suggest that the usual formula be so amended as to permit of a return of the London ring style of getting a man in the clinches with one arm fondly encircling his neck, while with the other fist he can beat him into a pulp.

* * *

YET this is distinctly what is hinted at in the latest statements from El Paso. Perhaps it may fit Willard as well as it does Johnson. That is something that is strictly up to the Willard people. And if it is agreeable to both sides of the argument the referee must wink at it and do the best he can. But he'll do well to have that perfectly understood before they start out on their four-hour journey in the Juarez ring.

* * *

THEY are training Willard to fight, not box. Tom Jones, who is handling the big Kansan, never favored the fancy man of the ring who tapped and ran away, perhaps to live another day. He likes the fellow who wades in, everlastingly taking a chance, who can assimilate a wallop and land one and who can do that same thing round after round. He had Billy Papke, a fighter of that type, who got his schooling in downstate rings, where rough work was appreciated and encouraged. Also he took up with Ad Wolgast, who is nothing if not of the rough and ready mold.

McInnis to Remain at First, Says Mack

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 8.—Since Connie Mack purchased the release of Napoleon Lajoie from the Naps a number of baseball critics have figured it out that the coming of Larry to the Mackmen meant that Stuffy McInnis, the peer of the American League first basemen, would be moved over to second base and Lajoie placed on first.

C. Mack, however, has other thoughts upon this subject and today stated most emphatically that he would not make such a change.

May Restore Racing at Oaklawn Track

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Feb. 8.—A bill to allow horseracing in Arkansas under control of a State commission and to permit the pari-mutuel system of betting was passed by the House and sent to the Senate. Supporters of the bill admit that its purpose is to restore horse racing at Hot Springs.

THEY FINALLY GOT KONEY'S GOAT

Considered absolutely impervious to criticisms during his career in the majors by those who know, Ed Konetchy's "temperamental blow-up" last year was one of the puzzles of the season. Just what grievance Konetchy had against the Pittsburg Nationals and organized ball in hard to understand.

"Koney" never was "touchy" in other matters, and on the other hand seemed to be without personal feeling when the "hooks" were thrown into him. When things began to break badly for him at bat last year Ed was plainly worried, but as for newspaper bangs and criticism he would only smile and say, "Well, it's all part of the game, boys." He took his lambastings with perfect grace, but on one occasion when he and Wagner were jointly criticised for failure to hit he took it up, saying: "Stand it to me, but for pity's sake be fair with the Dutchman."

Koney certainly acted admirably under fire, and his harshest critics began to admire and pull for him. But all of a sudden Konetchy began to show the artistic temperament of a flighty prima donna. Things had probably gone too far. The total collapse of the Pirate team, of which he had expected great things, and his own failure to live up to his reputation in his first year with Clarke, perhaps caused the moody spell that made him do strange things.

Johnson Plans to Escape Officers

LONDON, Eng., Feb. 8.—Jack Johnson is expected to arrive here from Buenos Ayres in a few days. He is to board the steamer Highland Harry, which sailed from the Argentine Capital January 21.

Shortly after his arrival, it is said, he will sail for Gibraltar, and will be transferred to a small boat outside of that port, and will be landed on the Mexican coast, hence he will be taken overland to Juarez for his fight with Jess Willard. This will enable him to dodge American authorities.

Pat Powers Behind Fed Team in Newark

Pat Powers, former President of the International League, is the backer of a Federal League team which will be placed in Newark this season.

Just at present Powers is in Chicago conferring with James Gilmore, president of the Federal League, and it is understood that the appointment of the transfer of the Kansas City franchise to Newark will be made soon.

Will Reorganize Boxing Commission

ALBANY, Feb. 8.—Governor Whitman is receiving many communications relative to the State Athletic Commission and its expected reorganization. There are many applicants for places on it. The Governor has stated that he will take it up as soon as some of the more urgent things are disposed of. It is understood here that he will have it reorganized with a single head.

Eddie McGoorty and Gibbons Matched

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 8.—Mike Gibbons and Eddie McGoorty, middle weights have been matched to meet in a ten-round bout at Hudson, Wisconsin, during the first week in March. The men will weigh in at 158 pounds at 3 p. m. the day of the fight.

"The Rabbit's" Column By Walter J. Maranville "SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES"

I'm starting in today to pick the winner of the "Manager's Contest" that has been running for a little over a week, and which ends on Saturday.

Gee, there's an awful pile of letters to be opened and read. As soon as I can pick the winner I will announce his (or her) name. You'd be surprised to know how many of the fair sex sent in lists. I have come across many of them so far, and there must be many more yet to come.

The Manager's Contest proved such a success that I believe I will start another one. As soon as I can "dope out" something that I think will interest my readers I will announce the details. I think that by Tuesday or Wednesday I can let you know about it. So be on the lookout for the announcement.

Reports of ball players jumping to the Federal League are numerous, but reports of Federal League players holding out for more pay are unique in baseball circles.

Such reports, however, broke out the other day. It was about the first indication that a player's life with the Feds is not, after all, a life of contentment and prosperity.

The report, too, concerns the Chicago Federal League club, supposedly the most prosperous of the lot. Two young pitchers who came from the lower grades a year ago are demanding big salaries from President Weghorn for the coming season. They are Jim Pole, the curvy hurler who came from the Roseland Eclipse team, and Mike Prendergast, the young curve ball artist who came from the Three Eyes League.

* * *

The contracts signed by the two boys last season were for one year only. Observing the rules of the league, both were offered new contracts calling for a 5 per cent. increase in salary over that of the preceding year. So far neither has consented to sign.

* * *

It looks as if some conclusive tests might soon be made of the new baseball contracts—the documents without any ten-day clauses—and also as if it behooved the big leagues to step carefully. Federals and lawyers are waiting at the gates, waiting to seize the slightest opportunity for action.

* * *

Under these new contracts—especially the three-year kind—the players are now beginning to claim that it is impossible to release them to the minors.

* * *

Earl Tingling, for instance, is out with a statement to the effect that he stands pat; that he refuses to be let down into the Pacific Coast circuit; that the Reds must make good in every detail or take a chance on court proceedings.

* * *

If the new contracts have been so worded that a player cannot be chased off his perch, this joke is on the big leagues, and the Players' Fraternity can sit tight.

* * *

The Federals can't laugh—those same contracts, even though they may force the majors to keep the men for years, automatically check the Federals from landing any of them.

* * *

Unless he soon experience a change of heart, there is little chance that Outfielder Otis Clymer, who was with the Braves for a while, will perform with Minneapolis this year. There isn't much of a difficulty between Clymer and the Cantillons—only a matter of $1,500.

* * *

Last year Clymer's contract called for a stipend of $2,200. A few days ago he was tendered a contract calling for $1,650 this season. Clymer says that before submitting to this indignity he will play semi-pro ball, and he is going to try to have himself declared a free agent.

Clymer's case is similar to that of all the Millers. When Mike Cantillon leased his Chicago property to the Feds for a ball park it was stipulated that the Feds were to keep their hands off the Millers.

As a consequence the Millers were the cheapest team in the league last season, and Pitcher Olmstead, who refused to come to terms, was kept idle all Summer.

Hopper, the pitcher who has won fame as the victim of the bird dog trade, was recently arrested, according to a tale from his Kansas home town, on the charge of assault and battery.

"Why did you assault this man?" queried the Justice of the peace at the hearing.

"He insulted me," replied Hopper.

"What did he say to you?" continued His Honor.

"Say!" shouted Hopper in vehement wrath. "He said 'how now?'"

Hopper wasn't as bad as he was pictured in the old days, evidently, for he has just been certified for a tryout by Washington.

May Shift Skeeters to West Philadelphia

President Ed R. Barrows of the International League says that the suggestion is being considered which would call for the transfer of the Jersey City club to West Philadelphia, a section of the Quaker City that is far removed from the big league ball parks.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—It [illegible] announced that it is now certain that Yale and Harvard will resume relations at their varsity race on [illegible] course, which they had used for many years, and now there is a sort of statistical row. NEW HAVEN, Feb. 8.—The Yale and Dartmouth hockey teams battle today and a victory for the Green would practically settle the intercollegiate championship.

Yale will be strengthened at least [illegible] by the return of Captain Sweezy, who has been out of the game for a week, but it is not to be expected that he will be in the best of condition.

Cloth for Which Tailors Charge as High as $75.00 a Suit

MY PRICE TO ORDER $15.50

Comparative advertising today is causing considerable comment, and I suppose I am to blame for a lot of it. In every ad that I publish I make it my business to tell the truth to the best of my knowledge. Every order that I get from a customer is an individual contract. I have taken orders for suits as low as $7.75, after buying out a tailor who charged, for the cloth that I used, as high as $35.00, and I have charged as high as $20.00 for goods bought in special trades which some manufacturers sold me off price, that I consider as good as used in $45.00 suits.

In the City of New York alone, the month of January, 1915, the poorest month in the history of mankind, my New York business was increased for this month alone, according to my books, over January, 1914, by $8,991.00. This proves that the people of New York appreciate the values that I am giving them.

When I say I have bought Austrian Drapes to sell for $15.50, and that there are tailors who use this same cloth in $75.00 suits, I say that which I believe to be absolutely true, and I am open at all times for discussion on this statement.

Before war laid waste in Austria, they made absolutely the finest worsteds, drapes and fine-faced dress cloths manufactured in the world. Up to the time of the war America was not in condition to compete with them. The difference in cost of labor here and there made it impossible for us to compete. On the reduction of the tariff, one of the largest Austrian commission houses in this country ordered thousands of pieces of black goods for men's suitings. The war, general business depression and the many things that went to make the pessimist happy, resulted in my purchasing hundreds, and hundreds, and hundreds, and then some, yards of fine Austrian Drape. Before the war these goods would have cost me around $3.75 to $4.00 a yard, bought in the regular channels. Today I get this great quantity of goods at a price that enables me to sell you Black Genuine Austrian Drape to your individual measure

A Study of Love and Laughter Based on the Great Comedy Success of the Same Name

By A. A. WATERBURY,
Novelizer of "The Family Cupboard," "At Bay" etc., etc.

"ALL right. If he has a witness, then, so do I," said Johns. "Kronig, stay right where you are. I want you for my witness."

"Well, boys—what's the row this time?" asked Vanderholt patronizingly.

"I want you to dissolve this partnership—at once," blustered Nettleton.

"And no patching up this trip—I want it ripped wide open," rapped out Johns.

Vanderholt looked from one to the other in half pity. Through his alert brain flashed all the things he might have said. He might have delivered a little oration like this: "What's the matter with you two? You have every reason on earth to pull together. Are you going to let this valuable business go to ruin simply because of your own pigheaded jealousy? What you boys need in this business is team work! That's the way to win out. But if, instead of pulling together, you fight, you are doing no less than to commit a cold-blooded business suicide and pay me for arranging the funeral decorations! Don't do it, boys. Quit your squabbling and fighting and nursing childish grievances. What's it all about anyway? Down at the bottom you're friends."

But did Thomas J. Vanderholt say this? Not he!

"Well, boys, this is business and we'll cut the friendship out," said the light of the legal profession. "I'm fond of you both—you know that. Old George has been a sort of running mate of mine for years. And I—Well, we've both had the good taste to admire the same girl."

Vanderholt smiled at Johns with some undercurrent of feeling that big, honest, simple fellow did not quite understand.

"Do I fully understand that you fellows are fully decided to dissolve partnership?"

FULLY DECIDED

"Ah-so-lute-ly!" rose the chorus in reply.

"All right. We'll do it. Question is, how will we do it?"

"That's what we're paying you for," suggested Johns.

"And heaven knows I'm earning my fee! Now then! The simplest and most amicable process is for one of you to buy the other out."

"Now you're talking!" broke in Nettleton.

"For the first time since you started," appended Johns.

"I'm glad you agree on something. Question second—Which one of you will sell? How about you, George?"

"Me sell out to that—fathead? Never! And how long do you think the business would last with that Napoleon of Finance at the head of it?"

Johns rose in the cumulative majestic, Jove-like anger of the slowly aroused big man. Nettleton instantaneously catapulted up and the two men glared at each other across the barrier of the table that Tabby and Fido over the back fence.

"Here, here! Sit down—both of you! I'll referee this battle. Mr. Nettleton refused to sell; well and good. How about you?" turned to Vanderholt.

"Who—me? Sell out the result of my brains to that hard-shelled crab there? Not T. J. Vanderholt!"

Vanderholt stretched out one hand to prevent Nettleton from rising again to this occasion.

"I construe that as another refusal. Now! Since a simple bill of sale is out of the question, well leave us the next amicable process. You two will divide the business. Each receive equal share of five customers, stock of pills on hand and good will of the company. Then you can go home and cut each other's throats at your own pleasure and convenience?"

"Fine! I like that!" agreed Nettleton amicably.

"So do I! It's great!" grinned the equally bloodthirsty Johns.

"Oh! now we are getting somewhere. Next question! When are you to retain the name of the present concern?"

"Naturally, I will——" began Nettleton.

"What, and get the advantage of all our advertising! Not much you don't!" shouted Johns.

"I don't! Didn't I originate the business—and build it up to what it is? And now I'm to hand it to you! Say, I tell that's half-witted! Nix to get heck into the water where he belongs!"

WORSE AND WORSE.

"You built up the business—George Nettleton! Ha! Ha! A fine business it was when I came along with first aid to the injured stomach of the T. S. A. All you had was a pill that wouldn't sell!"

"Just because you've come along with a measly five hundred dollars and a hideous parade-coating you think you've done it all," sneered Nettleton.

"They had both forgotten the Solon who stood ready to administer their affairs.

"I have!" thundered Johns.

"You haven't! And I'll prove it. I am the man who MADE the pills!"

"And I am the man who made the public SWALLOW them!"

Sally began to laugh wildly. To cover her mirth she began to cough equally wildly.

"Miss Parker, leave the room!" commanded Nettleton sternly.

"Miss Parker, do nothing of the kind!" ordered Johns.

"Will you two sit down?" thundered Vanderholt.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

The Spark and the Fire

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1915, by International News Service.

SOMEBODY said long ago, somewhere, with much sweetness in their hearts, I think, that "no love ever dies." They meant not man-and-maid love alone, you must know—but any love; for a flower, a child, your friend, the glory of the sunset in the western sky, your dear mother with the soft eyes. No matter if these should be broken, or lost, or buried, or fled away, still were they not dead. And this is a warm thing to lay at your heart—the belief in this. For then you will know that the seed you held in your heart blows into flower somewhere, in some fashion. And you will sing more, I reckon, and carry a featherweight heart in your body for knowing that.

Here now is the little maid with the soft little shoulders and the idle mind that flickers about in whimsical paths like the pale yellow butterfly of the Spring—but with Eve's heart in her small body and a doll-baby with taffy hair and violently blue eyes with regular twigs for eyelashes cherished close to her breast. And another small maid from the very same Eve-pattern yearning enviously and burningly to the other's baby. And some day this baby breaks her face into bits and is buried along with other memories, and another bud in the garden of LOVING seems dead. But it isn't so a-tall! The bud of mother-loving lies fast and asleep and very still until one day it breaks and blows into a perfect flower of primrose fame, and the smashed little doll of long ago is a satin-soft thing that breathes and makes bubbles and clutches at life with a fist like a peach-bloom petal. The spark under the gray ash has fanned into a leaping fire. The miniature as tiny as the hollow at the foot of your throat is a picture in "heroic" size that reaches to the sky and against the throne of God. The bud that was forgotten is a Princess-rose.

"No love ever dies." So don't ever think it. The love that you lavished somewhere that you think is dead may have been but a tiny thing—and never lost—only the possibility of a great reality that nas come!—NELL BRINKLEY.

The Triumph of Wit

How a Young Woman Made Good in the Face of Difficulties

"HOW did I become a traveller?" repeated the dainty little lady smilingly. "Well, to begin with, I must confess that it was really because I had failed in several other things.

"An advertisement settled my fate: "Traveller wanted for blouses. High-class trade. Salary and good commission to active worker.'

"I pondered. Why a man? I was certain I could sell blouses as well as any man.

"Have you an appointment?" was the clerk's hesitating reply, as he looked first at me, then at my card.

"It is quite all right; he is expecting me," was my smiling answer.

"And off he went.

"Sudden panic seized me.

"'Will you come this way, please?'

"Mr. ——, greeted me, and just for a moment my tongue stuck to the roof of my mouth.

"'I don't remember'——he began, looking very puzzled.

"Then I made my plunge and told my business. He was distinctly annoyed.

"I had no appointment with you! You told the clerk I was expecting you!"

His brow was black.

"I am sorry; but surely you did expect some orders in response to your advertisement? I said nothing.

"I turned quickly away for a moment; then faced me again.

"'I assure you, sir, that many of I have never employed women travellers'—this very tersely.

"'It is never too late to mend,' I answered, with a cheerfulness I was far from feeling, 'and you can remedy the error now. You see, it is obvious that a woman—the wearer of blouses—is far more capable of selling them than a mere man!'

"Then you have had no experience in the business. We deal with the most exclusive firms, and it is unprecedent. I do not care to entertain.'

"'Let me try,' I begged. 'I may not have had experience as a traveller, but I have had experience in wearing the things I am going to sell, and that is more than your most experienced man traveller can say. Also, as a woman, I have over and over again had the advantage of hearing a woman's heart-to-heart confidences regarding these delightful garments.'

"'I don't believe you would succeed in getting to see the right people.'

"'No people usually succeed in getting to see you as easily as I did.' I put in quickly.

"He broke into a roar of laughter.

"'No, they don't. I think you'll do.'"

As Others See Us

The afternoon was very hot. So, too, was the bishop. And not only was he hot; he was also very tired, for he had spent the day making visits to the slums. And "slumming" was even he, a bishop, had discovered—is aught but the ideal amusement for Summer weather.

However, his labors now over, he set about in return to the peace and comfort of his palace, and with this object in view accosted a small urchin whom he met loafing along the street.

"Can you," inquired the right reverend gentleman, "direct me to the nearest railway station, my boy?"

"Keep straight on," replied the lad, "and take the first turning to the left."

Then, cycling copiously the episcopal gaiters—obviously he knew but little of the ways and wallowings of bishops—"What's up, guv-nor?" he added. "Somebody pinch yer bike?"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

GUARD YOUR OWN FEELINGS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Some time ago I was introduced to a lady and gentleman, and from different sources I gathered that he was going out with the lady pretty steadily. The other evening he asked me to go for a walk. To my astonishment he told me that he loved me. Naturally, I brought up the lady mentioned into the conversation, and he told me that he had never known what love was till that night when he had spoken to me alone. What I would like to know is would I be getting honorably if I accepted his attentions, as I think I could return his affection? There were no really serious relations between the two. PERPLEXED.

THERE is no reason why you should not accept this young man's attention. But make sure that he is not the sort to turn lightly from one girl to another and to follow the lure of each new face. Otherwise your own feelings may be seriously engaged by a man who is a mere flirt.

WHICH IS RIGHT?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My friend is twenty, and one week last year went to a dance almost every week, each time accompanied by a different girl. This year he is a member of a club, where he renewed an old acquaintance with a girl, and has been taking her out for seven months. He says: "I've taken many a girl out in the last year or so, and I always figured they would be good wives. Now, I'm going with Eva, and after a study of her character I hope she some day will become my wife. I like her because she's respectable, sensible, and above all she respects her parents. I'll stick to her until I'm old enough to marry."

My friend is a smart and sensible man and in business for himself, but I claim he should not keep company with the girl now, for he is too young and in time he will grow sick of the girl. DUBIOUS.

I do not believe in long engagements. On the other hand, a friendship such as you describe may be simply friendship for years to come and then ripen into the best and surest sort of love and marriage—one founded on companionship. I do not think there is any danger of this young man's growing "sick of the girl"—if he does tire of her companionship—think how irksome the marriage bond would become.

WHAT TO DO FOR ITCHING SKINS

Eczema, ringworm and other itching, burning skin eruptions are so easily made worse by improper treatment that one has to be very careful. There is one method, however, that you need not hesitate to use, even on a baby's tender skin—that is, the resinol treatment. Resinol is the prescription of a Baltimore doctor, put up in the form of resinol ointment and resinol soap. This proved so remarkably successful that thousands of other physicians have been prescribing it constantly for 20 years.

Resinol stops itching instantly, and almost always heals the complexion quickly and at little cost. Resinol ointment and resinol soap can be bought at any druggist's.

The Husband Hunters

Judy and Jimmie Compton-Blake Agree to Be Good Friends

By ANN LISLE

"MISS HOYT-MORTIMER, I suppose," murmured James Compton-Blake interrogatively.

"I suppose you really came to see my sister," returned Judy with a rising inflection in her voice, too.

"I came to see exactly you," returned the guest. "You see, my sister and my fiance, Miss Torrance, are among the girls who have had cards from Reggie Burke saying that he would be ready to give them lessons at the Hoyt-Mortimer Studio. It's caused a lot of talk, Miss Mortimer—not all quite pleasant talk. But in the midst of the cackling a lot of silly women have been doing, Miss Torrance and Mrs. Lee Carter, who know you, have held forth that the sister of Judith Mortimer couldn't be er—er"—and the irreproachable leader of society stammered desperately as he faced the question in the gaze of the leader of the dance.

"I'm thirty years old, Mr. Compton-Blake. So you see I'm not a baby to be shocked by the worst of the gossip you have heard. Will you tell me exactly what you have heard about my sister?"

"Yes, I will," said Compton-Blake, simply. "And if I sound like a cad for repeating it please believe that I'm no more here to protect my sister Margaret and Miss Torrance than to try to straighten things out a bit for a little girl who happens to look very much like my own sister and for the big sister who looks—how personal can a fellow be without seeming like a patronizing bounder? I want to say you look perfectly 'white,' Miss Mortimer."

"Do you know, you look pretty 'white,' too. Shall we sit down and talk it over?"

"You've said I might speak quite plainly, Miss Mortimer. It's like this—when Reggie Burke's cards came there was a terrible lot of excitement. The really catty women said he was a young fool who was bewitched by a designing little minx.

SHE MAKES AN APPEAL FOR HER SISTER'S SAKE

"Yes, that's exactly what they would say. But won't you believe my sister isn't that?"

"If I had thought there was very much truth in what people said I shouldn't have ventured to come here," said Compton-Blake simply.

"I might have known that. I wasn't questioning your motive, I just naturally had to stand up for Bonnie. She's obliged to always choose the best of what she finds in her path in life. Reginald Burke was the most refined and cleverest man she'd ever come across. His good manners and breeding attracted Bonnie. That's why she wanted to be friendly with him. That's why she managed to climb so far in six months. The only way my little sister could have a place in the world was to earn it. I think the worst your snobbish friends could say is that she's a snob, too. Do you see that, Mr. Compton-Blake?"

"Yes, Miss Mortimer, I see it exactly. And probably some little chivalrous feeling toward a girl who looks like my own sister—something in the way Mrs. Carter and Miss Torrance fired up to defend you—made me think I'd better come here and tell you that the Burkes are ready to make a most infernal din about the fact that Reginald has chucked his real estate for a little flyer in dancing."

"What can I do?" asked Judith, wistfully.

"Do all those girls who have ridden in limousines and have maids and butlers and Fifth Avenue clothes all their lives think it will be easy for me to make my little twenty-year-old sister give up her chance at those things? What are all the people who gossip about Bonnie going to give her if she does resign her $100 a week job? Wouldn't they gossip about any girl from another world who came along and made friends with a man in their set? Wouldn't they think any girl who got so far in such a short time was fit prey for their destroying shrugs and insinuations? I'm sorry that Bonnie's dancing partner is a man from your set, but what did he earn in the real estate office, Mr. Compton-Blake?"

"Oh, commissions and a bit of a salary, I suppose. His father allowed him $3,000 a year and made him a present of a stray automobile or power boat now and then and housed him. I suppose Reggie might have cleared up $1,000 a year of his own."

"And he and Bonnie are signing a contract to dance at $200 a week. His interest in this studio will probably bring him at least $50 more. In two months at this work Reginald Burke will more than make as much as you say a year of real estate brought him. Has the friendship of any girl in your set been as valuable to him as that, Mr. Compton-Blake?. How dare they criticise Bonnie. Facts merely are for her and I think even appearances are, too."

JUDY AGREES TO TELL THE FACTS TO BONNIE

"Then you won't do a thing to influence your sister to give up her plans?" asked young Compton-Blake, rising and looking down at Judy with an expression she could not quite fathom.

"No. I'll tell her exactly how dangerous it is for an unknown girl who has come up from poverty to have as a partner a well-known man who has been in the habit of grafting a living from his father. I think the best thing that ever happened to Reginald Burke was meeting Bonnie. I'll admire her all the more if she sticks to him. But I'll apply the surgeon's knife by telling her. Now are you satisfied?"

"I believe you hate me," said Mr. Compton-Blake, in a rather startled tone of voice. "I came here with a righteous sort of feeling that I was going to do you a good turn by showing you the error of your sister's ways. You make me feel as if I had been a very smug Pharisee. Somehow I feel like a gossiping old tommy cat myself."

"Perhaps we've done each other a good turn," returned Judy, smiling with a friendliness she was surprised to find herself feeling. "In the beginning I was ready to apologize for my sister, and now I see how much more there is to explain away in the attitude of people who insist on seeing evil in honest work. The only thing I am sorry about is that Mr. Burke's people are permitted by their way he has chosen to make a living.

"Oh, I'm going to a little more butting in today. I'm going up and extend to the Burkes some of the graciousness of vision you've lent me, Miss Mortimer."

"Now you aren't angry because your mission has failed? You don't despise me for my attitude or think I'm an unpopular girl?" said Judy with an eagerness she could hardly understand.

"Despise you? I think you're fine. Could we be friends?" asked Jimmie Compton-Blake holding out his hand.

"I think we could—if people wouldn't misunderstand," said Judy.

She smiled a little wistfully and wondered if Miss Torrence would go right on approving of her even if she knew her fiance had offered Judith Mortimer his friendship.

"Then we're friends," said the man quietly. "Here's my hand on it. Will you take it?"

And Judith held out her hand.

SHAKESPEARE IN BOSTON TRIUMPH

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Whenever a knot of theatrical managers get together, nobody knows why, but that crowd of Shakespearean actors still at the Boston Opera House.

Then somebody else replies, "Yes," and they all make their heads and mutter:

"What do you know about that!"

William Shakespeare, playwright, has never been a long runner in this country. The theatrical tradition is that a first night marks a group of Shakespearean dramas, and by changing the bill every night be able to give them two or three weeks in a big city. But they credit his drawing powers to his celebrity, not to his plays. The story they look at it is talk. The public says to itself:

"Let's go look at Ada Rehan in 'Hamlet.' Not, 'Let's go see 'Hamlet, but 'Let's go see Sothern in 'Hamlet.'"

In the face of this tradition along come Henry Jewett, the actor, and W. H. Macdonald, the operatic manager, and the Boston Opera House with a company of comparative unknown English actors and announce a Shakespearean play for an entire week at popular prices, in a theatre which is the worst located in the city.

Some of the wise ones gave them one week, and some extended it to two, but no one knew but that they and the Jewett players still held the fort. Not only that, but they have increased their prices, and now are playing to bigger houses all the time.

The other day I went uptown to look over these miracle workers. Henry Jewett himself everybody knows. Years ago he starred in the "Chair Invisible," later he returned as the Grand Duke in "The Man from Home," a role in which he divided honors with the star, William Hodge, although William might not be will ing to admit it. Many a year Mr. Jewett opened the Plymouth for a brief season with a stock company which did not succeed.

This time he turned up with a completely English company. Everybody in the company is English except Jewett, and he does not always play. Not only are they English, but most of them have never been in America until this Winter, and when they wander out alone all sorts of weird things happen to them. Being English and not being familiar with local regulations, Mayor Curley and other institutions, they do things that might get them into officers. Last week Miss Compton played the boy in "Julius Caesar." She wore a short tunic, as Roman boys were wont to do, and she didn't wear any tights over her shapely limbs. But that happened to her was that she caught cold.

No politician ventured in to hear Shakespeare, and nobody noticed that the rule laid down at the time the Winter Garden show attempted to dispense with wearing apparel at the Shubert, was being violated by the late now. They are playing the "Merchant of Venice" this week.

That fine tragedian, Frank MacLean, was added to the company last week, and he is the only one of the lot who has really been in the profession. The gentleman who played Julius Caesar got arrested last week for trying to mail a letter in a fire alarm box, and inadvertently bringing put a fine display of language that's now verdant they are in our midst.

But how these actors and actresses can read blank verse! They have evidently been well grounded in Shakespeare, and those who have good diction and expressive declamation for the classic drama will do well to visit the Boston Opera House.

Society Women to Lecture, Prove Boon of Twilight Sleep

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Influential because of their own experience with the Freiburg method of painless childbirth, several society members of New York are to have completed plans for propaganda for the "twilight sleep" system.

Chief among them is Mrs. C. Temple Emmet, great-great-granddaughter of John Jacob Astor, and the first she was the first society woman to undergo the Freiburg treatment. Mrs. Emmet's last three children were born in Germany, she having gone there specially for the purpose.

The first of the proposed lectures will be given at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, [illegible] Tuesday.

Hits Roberts for Anti-Dry Bill Vote

Congressman Roberts of Chelsea was arraigned by the Rev. Willis A. Hadley, pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Chelsea, for his vote against the Hobson national prohibition amendment.

"He must know that when he attempts to make himself out a temperance man by pleading his vote for an license in his own city that his annual contribution to Massachusetts temperance organizations, that is in living some years in the past," said the pastor.

Worcester Farmers Cut Out Middlemen

WORCESTER, Feb. 8.—The market gardeners of Worcester County have joined forces to fight the middlemen, wholesalers and commission merchants, and today will make an attempt to place products directly in the hands of the retailer or the consumer.

The gardeners have incorporated themselves into a co-operative association with a capital of $10,000. They intend to sell only to the retailers or to the consumers.

Bandits Hold Up Palm Beach Train

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 8.—The Palm Beach limited train of the Florida East Coast Railroad, bound from Jacksonville to Miami, was boarded by four masked men at Stuart, early last night, and men passengers on the observation platform were robbed of money and jewelry.

No attempt was made to molest women passengers. They were compelled, however, to enter the car.

Women Play Indoor Golf

Boston Booms New Sport

New Fad Makes Big Hit With Men and Women Link Lovers.

Boston men and women have been hit by the indoor golf craze. The men link stars of the Hub are already playing this popular Winter game while the fair sex are planning to follow in their footsteps.

Neither wind, snow or cold weather now deters the real dyed-in-the-wool golfers from enjoying their favorite pastime during the Winter season. They will soon be able to go to any of the big clubs and play a few holes on the "indoor" links. The Boston C. C. A. and several other institutions have already established such courses. The big golf clubs are sure to follow their lead.

The indoor golf craze started in New York. Rooms have been prepared at several of the prominent hotels. These links are fitted up in the huge ball rooms, with grass mats for the putting green, painted scenery to represent the rolling hills and nets to prevent the balls from crashing through costly windows or still more expensive chandeliers.

Mrs. John Harrymore, wife of the famous actor and an actress of no small ability herself, is one of the many prominent persons who indulge in this new fad. She declares that it is a real treat to get from the theatre and journey to one of these indoor courses where she is able to get plenty of recreation.

'WAR WILL BRING NEW PATRIOTISM'

A new patriotism as the result of an aroused public opinion was predicted as an aftermath of the European war by Professor Jay William Hudson, who lectured in Tremont Temple under the auspices of the Massachusetts Peace Society on "The War and the New World Order." This was the first of a series of four Sunday afternoon lectures at Tremont Temple on "After the War, What?"

"The war arose not because of public opinion, but in spite of public opinion," said Professor Hudson. "The world did not want war and yet the world got war. How did we explain this strange situation?

"Public opinion was not sufficiently strong to prevent the recurrence of what it did not want. This is the one thing. It is the business of enlightened minds all over the world to so rationalize and so make vocal the convictions of the masses on the subject of international relations that a recurrence of the present catastrophe will be forever impossible. Probably the greatest responsibility in this direction rests with the American people.

"If public opinion is sufficiently well informed as to what this war will develop a new world order.

"There will be a new national integrity, a guaranty by international respect, based upon common international laws, in which the rights of small States will be guaranteed and in which international treaties will be considered the most solemn obligation agreed to in this world. There will be a new human biology, in which the best young men of the nation will not be sent to fields of slaughter to be killed, but in which they will be educated to the best constructive service to society.

"Above all, there will be a new international law, enacted not by force as in the past, but by reason. This will mean an international parliament of some sort.

"A United States Conference may well be intrusted with devising the ways and means by which an international government may be made operative and efficient."

90 Days for 'Gunman' Hundred Years Old

KILLINGLY, Ct., Feb. 8.—The most interesting case that has ever come before the town court was that of John J. Garcia, 101 years old, who came into town on a night recently, displaying an old time horse pistol and a dirk.

Judge Tucker was thunderstruck when the white haired prisoner said he was born at Cape Verde Island and was a little past one hundred years old. He said he had lived six days without eating, and when Judge Tucker gave him ninety days, he said:

"Thank ye, Judge; that will take me until the good old Summer time."

Testimony of New York Public Service Commissioner McCall Shows Why Government Ownership Is Necessary

They are holding a public inquiry into the failure of the Public Service Commission of New York in the recent disaster in the New York subway. Some extraordinary facts were revealed on the cross-examination of Mr. McCall, chairman of the Public Service Commission.

Mr. McCall was put on the Public Service Commission by Tammany and the corporations which helped to keep Tammany in power.

Although the secretary of the Public Service Commission had addressed to the Interborough officials sixty-five letters calling attention to its persistent ignoring of the commission's order to supply seats during rush hours, Chairman McCall testified last week that until very recently he knew nothing about the order which was issued three years ago, or the secretary's efforts to enforce it.

Pressed for an explanation of this extraordinary ignorance of a matter vital to the business he is supposed to conduct, he pleaded only lack of time.

Yet in the same hearing it was brought out that THE $15,000 A YEAR CHAIRMAN OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION HAD ACTED AS REFEREE DURING THE PERIOD OF HIS PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT IN NO LESS THAN 42 CASES.

For cases of this sort, producing an extra fee, he had always time. The New York American recently showed that he had time to serve August Belmont as attorney in a case against the State. But for the plain duties of his office he had not time—not enough to acquaint himself with the status of its affairs at the moment he took office.

In order that Judge McCall might be made acquainted with the past record of the commission an accountant was assigned at the time of Mr. McCall's appointment to make a survey of the work up to that date. This man worked eight months. But so far as can be learned he made no report. Chairman McCall never examined the results of his labors. Beyond his signature on the payroll there is no evidence of his employment. Yet he was engaged purely to acquaint the chairman with the past record of the commission.

From his own testimony it would appear that the chairman, being too busy to familiarize himself with the commission's records, had a man hired at public expense to brief these records, and was then too busy to look at the brief thus prepared.

BUSY AT WHAT? The 42 referee cases, each with its own pleasing fee, seem enough to explain the chairman's preoccupation. Because of it the Interborough was allowed for three years to ignore a specific order from the commission, and the 65 letters from the secretary went unheeded, as they naturally would when the chairman of the commission gave so little heed to this arrogant defiance of its authority.

Mr. McCall's testimony shows very clearly why the New York Public Service Commission has been a costly failure for the public, why it is an ally of greedy public service corporations instead of a stern and just regulator of them, and why the present Public Service Commission in that State should be abolished.

Mr. McCall is only an incident. He typifies the commission, which is permeated with extravagance and indifference to the duty it is supposed to discharge. To eject its members and replace them with Republican politicians of the same sort would not correct the evil. In fact, UNTIL THE CITY AND STATE ARE READY FOR PUBLIC OWNERSHIP OF PUBLIC UTILITIES there can be no complete correction to it.

TO A PRUNE

By PERCY SHAW

The price of prunes is going up owing to a shortage in the crop.—News item.

LET poets of romantic trend
Dilate in metaphoric phrases,
Or rich hyperboles expend
In voicing lovely woman's praises.
Our modest art in simpler tune
Shall seek the muse's treasured laurel
By singing of the humble prune
In crisp, calm, cogitative choral.

Oh prune, they say your price will rise,
Since with the bean your race is dying;
Behold the tears that flood our eyes,
Hark to the sorrow in our sighing.
Must we forego your wrinkled smile,
And class you as a childhood fable,
Where once we knew you all the while—
Sweet Damon of the breakfast table?

Must we look trembling toward dessert,
Where once your form serenely floated
Alone in gorgeous state, alert,
Though supercilliously bloated?
How dull the noonday meal will be
With you no longer there before us;
How we'll repent the past as we
Remember the old scornful chorus,

Great men in future times may say,
"I ate a prune when I was seven;
"Take caviar and squabs away,
"That surely was a taste of heaven."
Or boys with glances palpitant
May read beneath the glass this label:
"Here is the only prune extant,
"Once found in swarms on every table."

The Self-Supporting Girl

By REV. MABEL M. IRWIN

AT what age should a girl be able to be self-supporting? Just as soon as she is a girl—and not a child. Even while quite young and still in school her helpfulness should begin to be something of a family asset. This, too, not only in justice to the wage earners of the family, but in justice to herself and her own future.

A girl's ability to be entirely self-supporting should, of course, be a thing of gradual achievement. No girl should be expected to be able, either in the home or out of it, to at once be fitted for any work that would give her adequate support. Training and experience are necessary along any line, and must be had before she should be expected to earn a living wage; and this should always be taken in account.

If a girl's taste leads her to adopt another vocation than homemaking she should, nevertheless, learn—preferably while in her mother's house—to do everything that the home requires. It is futile to argue that because some girls have professional tastes that would naturally take them outside the home there is no need for them to learn how to take care of a home.

Whatever her vocation, there will never come a time when she will not need to know this. No matter to what station in life she may be called, no matter how much wealth she may possess, the higher the station and the greater the wealth the greater the need of this knowledge. If she fail to acquire it no household over which she may, as mistress, preside will ever have the atmosphere of a true home.

Any girl who can willfully homemake has already attained to the place where she is capable of self-support; and this, too, whether she is in the house of her father or that of her husband. These services so rendered should receive the proper money acknowledgment—in the case of her father, a salaried wage, or food, shelter and clothing, with a regular allowance for extra needs; in the case of her husband, an equal share in the family purse.

No girl should ever be allowed to reach the marriageable age without either some trade or profession—among which home-making ranks high—which will enable her to earn honestly her self-support. Then, if she choose to remain unwed, her economic future is safe, and if she choose to marry, she goes to her husband—not as some helpless creature who, without his support, would perish, but as a helpmate, to do her share in the making and keeping of the home, and there to receive the honor and the support that is her due.

The time is passed when helplessness or inability to earn her own living was a girl's passport to marriage and family life. The time now is when every self-respecting girl, the rich as well as the poor, will refuse to go to her husband other than as one entirely able and willing to do her share of the world's work as a self-supporting homemaker and mother.

SHALL A GIRL WORK To Support HER LAZY BROTHERS?

Dorothy Dix Tells of Young Woman Who Struggles to Keep Three Able-Bodied Men, and Shows She Is Doing Injustice to Whole Family

By DOROTHY DIX

AMONG my acquaintances is a splendid young woman who holds a responsible position in a big business house. She receives a good salary, enough to enable her to dress well and indulge herself in many luxuries, but she is always poorly clad, scrimps on her lunch and car fare, and has gotten the reputation among her co-workers, who observe how she looks at a nickel before she lets it go, of being little short of a miser.

The girl sees the contemptuous glances with which her associates regard her parsimony, and they stab her like so many knives, for she is in reality the most generous soul alive. She would like to be free handed. Also, being a woman, and young and good looking, she would like to have pretty clothes, and to go to the places of amusement whose doors she never enters because she cannot afford to spend a cent on self-indulgence.

And the reason why?

This girl's mother, without perhaps realizing what a crime she is committing, is deliberately making her daughter a slave to support three lazy brothers. And many other mothers are doing the same thing.

Three Able-Bodied Brothers Take Ease While Girl Is at Work

In this particular home not a dollar comes into it that is not earned by the girl. She pays the rent, and for the light, the heat, and the food. The mother has no income and furnishes nothing, yet she persists in thinking of the home as her home, and says, "that while I have a roof over my head my boys shall have a place to stay."

Every morning the girl gets up early and goes to work, leaving her three able-bodied brothers calmly snoring, secure that when they choose to arise, along toward noon, that mother will have some special dainty prepared for them. And mother thinks that this is all right. She makes a thousand excuses for their idleness, and considers that her daughter is very mean and hard hearted when she objects to supporting a bunch of idlers and would like some of the money that she earns to spend upon herself.

And the girl is helpless because she wants to take care of her mother, and she can't take care of mother without mother supporting her good-for-nothing sons.

Of course this girl, and every other woman who supports a strong and healthy man, is an easy mark that the fool killer will as surely get some fine day. She gets neither thanks nor ha'pence, for the man who deliberately sits down and lets a woman take care of him is invariably a yellow cur that bites the hand that feeds him.

Girl Will Really Aid Brothers by Refusing to Support Them

Therefore, I would advise this young woman and every one confronted with the same problem to simply shut their doors on their loafing brothers, and force them to go to work. In that way they will not only rid themselves of a burden that they are under no obligation to bear, but will do the one thing that is possible to make a self-respecting and decent man out of an idler.

Laziness is a disease that requires heroic remedies to cure, and the best antidote for it ever devised is simply to chuck a man out into the world, where he must either work or starve. Hunger has done more to allay that tired feeling with which so many men are born than any other one thing in the world.

As long as a loafer knows that he's got a warm place to sit, a good bed to sleep in and three square meals a day to eat he isn't going to wear himself out looking for work, and he's going to be mighty particular about the sort of job he takes. But if he knows that only his own labor stands between him and want, he'll get right down to the real pursuit of a job, and in work he'll find the independence that makes him a man.

The case of this girl who is forced by her mother to support her three lazy brothers is not an isolated one. I have known many other such ones myself, and I get hundreds of letters from working girls telling exactly the same story and making the same complaint. They love their mothers, they feel a high sense of duty and desire to divide their earnings with their parents, but they feel it a hardship that they have to support brothers far more able to work than they are.

Girl Who Pays Bills Has Right to Full Control of Home

These girls are right. It is most cruelly unjust that their mothers should rob them of their hard-earned wages to give the money to trifling and often drunken sons, and the girls should have the courage to rebel and refuse to submit to such treatment. The one who earns the money that supports a home is in law the head of it, and the girl who pays the bills has a right to say who shall live in that home and eat of the food that she buys. Certainly no sister is under any obligation to slave herself to death to buy whiskey and cigarettes for an idle man, even though he is mother's darling and mother thinks that she ought to.

It is a strange perversity of mother love that makes a woman willing to sacrifice her daughters to her sons, but that appears to be the way that nature built a mother's heart. When a girl goes to work mother thinks that she should turn over her pay envelope to her, and that she should help with the housework when she is at home, but she never dreams of her son turning over his pay envelope to her or doing the dishes after supper, and if he even pays his board she goes about bragging about what a good boy he is.

But because mother is willing to support her loafing sons is no reason why Sister Susie should, and if Sister Susie has an inch of backbone she won't do it.

You stroke it from whiskers to tail
